just letting home that she’s been through a lot.”

The dog is recovering rapidly and is clearing her surrounding areas. April said.

“She’s a friendly, reactive dog, but she was Wedsday.” April said.

“She remembers her name. We call her and she looks at us.” She recognized my husband right away. When he came home Wednesday and said her name, she started wagging her tail. She’s skin and bones but she looks like a typical little puppy.

FULL CIRCLE

For Angus, Maggie’s return brings her pet’s odyssey full circle, April Hight said. “One of (Angus’s) fond memories we talk about a lot is when she was little, my husband would sit on the couch and play this tune we called ‘The Maggie song.’” April said.

“It’s something from her childhood coming around to her home range years. She can put the gig of it all together.”

For Maggie to come home after what she experienced is little short for us. That she’s safe and she’s home. That’s what I’ve been reflecting on. Our goal is to see children go home, too.”

BUSINESS

The revision, as approved by the City Council, will be an amendment to the city’s comprehensive plan. The City Council requires state approval if adopted by the city.

The plan would include incentives to encourage downtown businesses to enhance pedestrian connections and connectivity between the downtown area and Pensacola Park.

Easter reminds us what lies ahead

Picture this: Thursday night. Darkness. Jesus prays alone in the garden. His disciples sleep.

Armored men suddenly appear. They arrest Jesus, who experiences betrayal, fear, desertion and denial.

Friday, 6 a.m.: Jesus is tried on blasphemy and sedition charges, he is found guilty and sentenced to death on a cross.

Friday, 9 a.m.: Jesus receives 29 lashes with a cat-o’nine-tails and a crown of thorns jammed on his head. He is forced to carry his own implements of death, the cross. Soldiers drive nails into his hands and feet to secure him to the cross. They uncannily drop the cross into the hole in the ground to keep it erect.

Friday, 12 p.m.: The sky fills with dark, boiling, threatening clouds as Jesus suffers.

Friday, 3 p.m.: Jesus’ body is removed from the cross, spreaded in burial cloths, laid in a borrowed tomb, and is left for dead.

Saturday all day long: The disciples huddle in fear and sorrow in sorrow.

Sunday 6 a.m.: Women prepare Jesus’ body for burial—but then discover the tomb is empty... and they realize... Jesus had come back to live just as he said he would!

This is what separates Christianity from all other religions. We worship a risen savior. Not even death could keep Jesus in its bonds.

Easter’s deep meaning gives Christians the kind of hope, joy and peace to live this life knowing that the best is yet to come.

In the 1940s, there was no shortage of locally owned grocery stores. Homer Holland brought the IGA, which residents just called, “the IGA.” It shared the shopping center with the public library.

Holland opened the first grocery store on 8th Avenue in 1935. Later, Ferris Patten opened one on Main Street in 1942. By the 1950s and 60s, chain supermarkets were appearing small locally owned grocery stores out of the market. chain supermarkets’ arrival customers lost personal services. Curenton, said, “Mother had one German man who come in and order a pound of hamburger meat and he’d eat it right there in the store,” she said. “We couldn’t stand it right there in the store,” she said. “We couldn’t stand it, she wanted him to come back.”

By the 1950s and 60s, residents were experience new “modern” shopping — complete with Muzak and pre-butchered meat in the refrigerated cases — at the supermarket.

The IGA later moved to the crest of Crestview’s shopping area. Crestview’s Piggly Wiggly opened downtown at the corner of North Ferdon Boulevard and Shibley Annex, taking up retail space that Goodwill and Alamo now occupy.

Piggly Wiggly’s third home became the Crestview News Bulletin’s third home in the 1940s. Quality Food Store on Main Street became the Crestview News Bulletin’s second home in the 1940s.
