Velma Conyers, 104, was “a lady,” her daughter, Mary said. “She really lived up to that.” Haynes said. “She really enjoyed her life. She would see that they got it or that they didn’t afford it,” Haynes said. She said and her husband, James Robert Lee Conyers also served through the Crestview Masonic Lodge, in his case, and Order of the Eastern Star, in hers. Conyers joined the lodge when she was 17 years old, and was a Worthy Matron for 34 years before becoming the center of community support for black American veterans over the years, and the whole of Crestview today, through such services as the annual No Child With- out Healthcare Fair.

When asked what she enjoyed most, Haynes said, “She really enjoyed her church and she enjoyed fishing and she just loved to be around grandchild- ren. We can be sorry, but you have to know she lived a great life.

“The reason she was blessed (was) she really lived (what she believed).” She said, “If she didn’t like nobody, and she really lived up to that.”

CRESTVIEW — Commu- nity leader Velma Conyers died Sept. 30. She was 104 years old.

Services include a 5-7 p.m. visitation, Monday, at McEl- mini Funeral Home, 108 Martin Luther King Jr., Ave., Crestview, and funeral services which is 11 a.m. at Mount Zion AME Church, 502 McDonald St., Crestview.

“She’s always been a joy to be around,” her son-in-law, Malcolm Haynes of Crestview, said. “You knew her for over half her life and through all those years she really hasn’t changed, as far as her spirit and commitment to the people of her community and her family.”

Conyers worked in the lunchroom at Carver- Hill School, which was a segregated school for Afri- can-American children, until the late 1960s.

“Many people tell us if she hadn’t been there, they wouldn’t be there today,” Haynes said about that day. She would see that they got it or that they didn’t afford it,” Haynes said. She said and her husband, James Robert Lee Conyers also served through the Crestview Masonic Lodge, in his case, and Order of the Eastern Star, in hers. Slow cooking ideas for the busy family

- Chicken & Rice
  - 1½ pounds boneless, skinless chicken breast, cut into 1-inch pieces or strips
  - 3/4 cup long-grain rice, uncooked
  - 3/4 cup chopped onion
  - 2 cups sliced green beans, fresh or frozen
  - 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
  - Salt & pepper to taste
  - Place browned meat in slow cooker. Add remaining ingredients and mix to well. Cover and cook on low for at least 5 hours. Makes 6 servings.

- Old-Fashioned Chicken & Rice
  - 2/3 cup chicken broth
  - 1/2 cup long-grain rice, plump and ready
  - 1 clove garlic, minced
  - 1/2 cup fresh parsley, cut in 1-inch cubes
  - 1/2 cup diced carrots
  - 2 cups chopped celery
  - 2 cups diced tomatoes
  - 5-6 cups tomato juice
  - 2 teaspoons garlic powder
  - 2 teaspoons dried oregano
  - 2 teaspoons dried basil
  - 1 cup fresh parsley, finely chopped
  - 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms, drained
  - 1 cup fresh parsley, finely chopped
  - 1/2 cup chopped onion
  - 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
  - Salt & pepper to taste
  - Place browned meat in slow cooker. Add remaining ingredients, mix to well. Cover and cook on low for 3-4 hours, or until chicken is no longer pink and rice is plump and tender.

- Favorite Beef Stew
  - 3 carrots, sliced
  - 1 cup fresh parsley, cut in 1-inch cubes
  - 2 pounds beef stew meat, cut in 1/4-inch cubes
  - 1 cup beef broth
  - 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
  - 1 cup gravy, minced
  - 1/2 cup salt to taste
  - Combine all ingredients in slow cooker in order listed. Stir well enough to mix seasonings throughout. Cover and cook on high for 10-12 hours, or on high for 6-8 hours. Makes 6-8 servings.

Columbus Day is observed on Oct. 9 and it is true that if you take a look at the history of the United States, it's a good idea to diversify among different countries. The U.S. market is concentrated so well when the U.S. markets are strong, has happened in recent years. But when the inevitable downturn happens and you own a company that is concentrated in U.S., your portfolio will probably be hit. At the same time, however, other regions of the world might be doing considerably better than the U.S. mar- kets — and if you put some of your investment holdings in those regions, you might at least blunt some of the effects of the downturn mar- kets. As an investor, you don't have to "cross the ocean," as Columbus did, to find opportunities — but it may be a good idea to put some of your work outside the United States. So, why should you consider investing internationally? The chief reason is diversification. If you only invest in U.S. companies, you may be missing out on gains that have happened in recent years. But when the inevitable downturn happens and you own a company that is concentrated in U.S., your portfolio will probably be hit. At the same time, however, other regions of the world might be doing considerably better than the U.S. mar- kets — and if you put some of your investment holdings in those regions, you might at least blunt some of the effects of the downturn mar- kets. Crestview family displaced after house fire

By Annie Blanks
ablanks@nwfdailynews.com

CRESTVIEW — A family with an infant child was displaced overnight Sunday after a fire ravaged their Brock Avenue home.

According to the Crestview Fire Department, units responded to the single-family home at around 1:49 a.m. Monday. When firefighters arrived on scene, flames were showing from the exterior of a bedroom window located in the rear of the residence.

When firefighters made entry into the home, piles of clothing and a bed were on fire, and the fire had spread to the rear bedroom window and attic. Crews were able to extinguish the blaze quickly and the remainder of the home and its contents were able to be salvaged. The estimated damage to the residence is about $20,000.

The cause of the fire has not yet been determined and the investigation has been turned over to the Florida Bureau of Fire Arson and Investigations.

Stacey Rae McDonald, her boyfriend, Morshun Guy, and their four-month-old son, Dominic, were in the home sleeping when McDonald said she woke up surrounded by flames. McDonald, Guy and Dominic were able to evacuate the home safely, but had to leave most of their belongings behind. “We have nothing,” McDonald said. “Everything in my home is a total loss.”

McDonald, a department manager at Walmart in Niceville, and Guy, a Subway closing manager in Niceville, said they have received assistance from the American Red Cross in the form of money and clothes for their son, but are asking for more donations of clothing and baby supplies to help replace what they lost.

Their infant child wears 6- to 9-month size clothes and size two diapers. Guy wears size 16 pants and extra large shirts, and McDonald wears a double extra-large shirt and size 22 pants. They also are asking for donations of infant socks, towels and rags.

McDonald can be reached at 850-855-6128, and their family is providing updates on their Facebook page, “The Guy Family.”

Crestview dancers bring home wins

By News Bulletin staff

Crestview — Students at The Southern Dance Company, a local studio, brought home several awards from the Irish Channel Feis competition Sept. 16 in New Orleans, Louisiana.

Irish dancers Jane Taylor, Piper Hall, Rachael Bell, Kaylyn Converse and Logan Schulte, all of Crestview, placed and brought home medals, 10 of which were for first place.

“Our Irish dance program is a part of the Irish Dance Studio in Fort Walton, which also won big times [with 11 first-place awards] at [that] weekend’s events,” studio director and instructor Carissa Taylor, of Crestview, said.

She said “feis” is a Gaelic or ancient Irish term for a community gathering for competition in dance and other arts including baking, singing and drawings.

I am becoming more liberal in my beliefs as I'm older and see beyond the filters people try to use to make black and white decisions on gray issues. I am not a fan of sending young men and women into war zones. I'm that supporter of the military who doesn't want soldiers to become heroes by getting hurt, killed, or being changed forever by living in constant fear for their lives. Sometimes war is necessary and the men and women of the armed forces take care of business. I never thought I would see dedicated people who risk their lives for our freedom being used as pawns in a political game. I'm also a guy who has never tasted alcohol, but would be in favor of legalizing marijuana. I don't think more people should smoke to get high. However, I can't rationalize how alcohol can be purchased at restaurants, convenience stores, and grocery stores but marijuana is somehow illegal. I'm sure my opinion on that isn't very popular, but I get tired of seeing people advertise one addictive substance that destroys lives and leads to multiple deadly car accidents while another substance that is no more additive or dangerous is the subject of drug busts. When alcohol was banned, people still found a way to drink. It was just more clandestine and dangerous. How is that different than marijuana today? The horrendous mass shooting in Las Vegas brought further proof of my failing faith in legislators and legislation to save the world. My belief on gun control has been complicated and inconsistent in my adult life. When I worked as a night manager at a hotel, I carried a gun. I walked through the parking lot several times a night to make sure everything was safe. What I was supposed to do if I saw something was happening, blow a whistle? After I graduated from college and got married, I saw no use for having weapons around. I don't live in fear. The circumstances in which I could need it are very very rare. I am supposed to ask a burglar to hold on for a second while I retrieve my handgun? I never wanted to openly carry a weapon. I just wanted to be able to get those people who want to do something with guns to stop and have a right to own a weapon for self-defense, sport and hunting. I have always believed that some gun control measures that many liberals should be implemented. I don't believe in slippery slopes concerns. People with a background in domestic abuse, mental health issues and other problems that indicate a higher likelihood of owning a gun to hurt themselves or others should never be able to own a gun. However, I struggle with the fact that most mass shootings and even mass murders happen when someone vio- lates a law we already have. How is gun control the answer? America seems to be a hellhole for mass murder even as the total number of homicides drops every year. Other countries that have gun control to explain how they prevent it. But the guy shooting concert attendees in Las Vegas violated gun laws. Laws didn't stop him. You just can't prevent crazy by making it illegal. I don't believe that more guns are necessarily better. But guns are here. Even a concentrated effort to get rid of them would leave plenty around for criminals. Hillary Clinton and many Democratic legislators are quick to call for gun control to prevent future events like Sunday's. They say that "thoughts and prayers" and "warmest con- siderations" don't help. They want to do something. I get that. We all want to do something— to stop the madness. I would be open to any idea that would prevent us from having to report that more people were shot today. I haven't seen the legislation that would do that, yet. Most of these horrible acts in the shooter's death by his own hand or a law enforcement officer. Prison sentences are rarely relevant to the situation. I hate to resign myself to the constant possibility of an act turn. I understand the emotional reaction of the people who want to do something about guys with 10 guns and a suit case full of ammunition opening fire on thousands of innocent people trying to enjoy themselves. I don't have the answer. In my life, I have waved from considering strict gun control to resigning myself to the fact that the people who have reached a point where truly preventative gun control may be impossible. I wish I had a better answer. Unfortunately, the only answer may be to do more good to balance the scales. LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Oklahoma tax proposal 'really unrealistic'

Dear editor,

Why is the Oklahoma County School System asking taxpayers for more money when they are busing football players to play games in other states when there are more around them within regular season games? They are spending money on gas, employees’ pay, hotel rooms, food and other expenses. This keeps the government spending. This is outrageous, especially when the county continues to raise our taxes over $100 per house. This is really unacceptable.

Crestview dominates Chocotaw

By Sam Grubenhoff

Crestview’s defense opened the game with a pair of interceptions. Flavors’ pick was the Bulldogs’ first of the season. Crestview’s interception was the result of a quarterback Brady Ooten pass and much like his team, it never looked back. Ooten, meeting the immovable force, was on the ground. Crestview band was playing football in the half time between the last two Baker possessions. By Sam Grubenhoff

The Tigers a loss in their own back yard in front of over 25,400-plus fans with a score of 24 to 21, and saw their dreams go down the tubes in Baton Rouge, La.? What happened? Tennessee Vols are in complete chaos and the fans have known this from the very first game of the year. LSU was caught napping and looking to week six when they play Florida, and now that game means nothing to LSU anymore.

Both losses can be contributed to the coaching on both losing teams, but then again that’s what college football is all about, right?

Here are your 10 picks for the week plus a scoreboard for Oct. 7:

1. Virginia Tech Hokies vs. Boston College Eagles — the Eagles fly high in this game. Notre Dame Fighting Irish vs. Texas A&M Aggies — OK, folks, this is the SEC game of the week, and as the favored team, Alabama has been seen in many weeks, Alabama State by 17. 7. Ole Miss Rebels vs. Auburn War Eagles — the Eagles fly high in this game and at home. Auburn by 10. 8. LSU Tigers vs. Florida Gators — will it be interesting to see just how LSU took the last week and how the Gators find enough eligible players to suit up for the game. LSU by 10. 9. Missouri Tigers vs. Kentucky Wildcats — plenty of cat food to go around this game; Kentucky in a surprise win by 13.

10. Arkansas Razorbacks vs. South Carolina Gamecocks — the Gamecocks are back, not as strong as in the past but enough to take the Razorbacks to the sheds by 20.

The Mighty Germ

Have you ever wondered how we catch colds, flu, and other diseases? A sore throat might be caused by bacteria or viruses. Diseases such as flu are caused by viruses. Illnesses such as food poisoning can be caused by bacteria such as E. coli, Staphylococcus, and salmonella (Sal-muh-NELL-uh).

Bacteria and viruses are some of the tiniest creatures on Earth. They are also some of the most powerful. They can wipe out armies or destroy crops. Some bacteria also help keep everything on Earth alive.

As the school year gets underway, The Mini Page takes a look at the germs that can make us sick.

What are bacteria?

Bacteria are creatures made of just one cell. A cell is the smallest unit of life that can function on its own. Bacteria are so small that hundreds to thousands of them could fit on the period at the end of this sentence.

Bacteria can grow in many different habitats, such as the soil, human bodies, animals, and plants. They have even been found living in some volcanoes and at the bottom of the ocean. Experts believe bacteria may be some of the earliest forms of life.

Helpful and harmful

Without bacteria, life would not exist on Earth. They break apart dead matter and return the materials to the environment. Bacteria are necessary for our health. They live in our intestines and help us digest food so we can use the vitamins and minerals in it.

These bacteria do not normally cause illness. But if something throws our bodies off balance, such as not getting enough sleep or healthy food, the normal bacteria in our bodies can multiply and make us ill.

Bacteria can also enter the body from outside. They might get in through your mouth or nose, contaminated food or a cut.

What are viruses?

Viruses are much, much smaller than even bacteria. They are so simple, some experts do not think they are actually living organisms. Viruses cannot survive outside of a host, such as a person, animal, or plant.

Other experts believe viruses are the smallest form of life. From 10,000 to 1 million viruses could fit in on a period.

Eco Note

In Myanmar, an outbreak of swine flu in July and August infected 17 people and infected another 166, mainly around the largest city, Yangon. People in the former capital have seen worsening living standards, and avoiding crowded places such as shopping malls. Swine flu is caused by the H1N1 virus.

First responders honored for their service

By Alicia Adams

CRESTVIEW – Woodlawn Baptist Church held a luncheon each year to show appreciation for local first responders. Pastor George Katsum said approximately 70 firefighters, police officers and emergency medical technicians attended last year’s luncheon, so he expected at least 80 this year. There were no formal speeches or events planned, just open doors waiting for first responders to come inside and grab a plate of food. Katsum said a prayer with the group of first responders gathered in the gymnasium, thanking them for their service and asking for their protection. Katsum is a retired firefighter. Walls and tables were lined with artwork made by kids at the church thanking the first responders for their dedication.

Solutions to keep people out of yards

An inconvenience and a hazard

Crestview installed “no parking” signs on Stillwell Boulevard, across from Walker Elementary, to help with the problem of drivers parking in residents’ yards while waiting for school to let out.

Shimeld said traffic is a hazard, because if an emergency vehicle would need to get through, they likely couldn’t. In addition, many cars try to pass on the opposite side of the road on the shoulder, and that is dangerous with children waiting to school. Shimeld said he has met with Mayor David Cadde a few times about the issue.

“City boundary lines are confusing in the area of Walker School. The school is in the city of Crestview, but the opposition side is in the county,” Cadde said. “I spoke with the principal last year about the concerns I was hearing from residents in Walker does have a traffic issue”

CRESTVIEW – School traffic on Stillwell Boulevard has sparked concern among area residents, including some who said they regularly can’t get out of their driveway. Christopher Shimeld’s grandparents live on Valley Road, a street off Stillwell near Walker Elementary. According to Shimeld, traffic from the school on weekday mornings and afternoons is so bad that the drive- ways of many houses and multiple intersections are blocked for hours.

that area whose drive- ways were being blocked in the afternoon pick-up time. I have also sug- gested that the school resource officer patrol that area and leave driveways open.

“Many people have doctor appointments... and are having diffi- culty getting out of their homes, I have been informed that nothing has changed this school year.”

The search for solutions

As of this writing, the Crestview Police Department has not responded to emails on the matter; however, Okaloosa County Sheriff’s Office spokes- person said they have been working with the school to attempt to find a solution.

“Yes, Walker does have a traffic issue. The school district is aware of the problems because this is not a new issue,” Sgt. Eric Denny, an officer with the youth services divi- sion, said. “The school has re-worked the traffic patterns several times in an attempt to ease the traffic flow on Stillwell. Myself, the school resource officer, the principal and the assistant super- intendant walked the school campus at the end of last year in an attempt to find a solution to the problem.

“We have sent traffic officers to monitor the alter- nation, but there is not an easy solution unless the city/county builds a long turn lane into the school,” Denny said. “There is a major drain- age ditch that would be affected and they were told it would be very expensive.

According to Danny, Matt Christmas, Walker’s resource officer, installed additional signs at the school tell- ing parents not to drop students off in nearby neighborhoods. “If we need to get a sign made to block drivers, we can do that as well,” Danny said. “Writing tickets is not going to go ease the traffic flow.”

Henry Kelley, commu- nications director for Okaloosa County schools, said the prob- lem is not on school property, therefore, it’s not within the school district’s jurisdiction.

In the meantime, thinned said the traffic is not an ideal traffic in the students area and affecting the whole community. “I have a million solutions that could fix this,” he said.
