Highlands County celebrated its 2011 high school graduates Friday and Saturday with cheer, tears and applause.

"At the beginning of the year, I made this class two promises," Avon Park High School Principal Stu Guthrie said in his opening speech at the graduation ceremony at the South Florida Community College. "First, that says state welfare recipients must promise to support a requirement forcing those seeking welfare in Highlands County may have to submit drug testing, and he followed through with his promise by signing House Bill 353. "While there are certainly legitimate needs for public assistance, it is unfair for Florida taxpayers to subsidize drug addiction," Gov. Scott stated in a press release. "We don't have the policy yet, that comes from Tallahassee," and we should get that soon. It does not affect those collecting food stamps, as far as I know, just those on the TANF program," Ayers said.

The new law states that those seeking assistance will be sent out to a testing facility where they will have to pay for a drug test, which is estimated to be between $10 and $40 by the DCF. If the individual passes the drug test, they get reimbursed for the costs and are eligible to receive benefits under the TANF program. If an applicant fails the drug test, they become ineligible for assistance for one year. A second failure could disqualified the applicant from receiving benefits for three years. I used to have a falling sleep problem. I would sleep most nights, Don’t get me wrong though and try to get up every morning without my medicine. Now that I have my new sleep schedule I don’t even have to take anything extra to fall asleep. I would never try to get up in the morning without taking it. I have to get up for work and to feed the kids. I have to have something to keep me up at the whole time. Now, I have a whole story behind my sleep problems, but I’m sure you can see that I’m not just saying this to try to make you believe me. I’m here to tell you the truth. I have a lot of personal problems that I want to share with the world. I believe that the best way to do this is to write letters to the editor. I want to help as many people as possible to get the help that they need.

TO OUR FRIENDS, NEIGHBORS, AND ACQUAINTANCES

Ashley Cleveland

There are no words to express our deep appreciation for your prayers, gifts, food, cards, flowers, and loving kindness during our time of immense sorrow. The outpouring of love from you and the entire community was awe-inspiring. Ashley was a shining star, full of life, love and compassion for anyone that crossed her path. We knew Ashley was a special person and a blessing to our family, but we had no idea how much of a positive impact she had on so many people. Our prayer is that each of you will feel the rest of your life passing on the love Ashley shared with you. Talking with many of you about how Ashley changed your life for the better, continues to be a comfort to us. We love her and will miss her every day for the rest of our lives.

Thank you again for all you have done, Ron & Debbie Cleveland and The Entire Cleveland family.

Hurricane Rita in 2005 was the last landfalling hurricane in Florida. But before we can predict the number of hurricanes this season, we must first determine how strong the season will be.

The National Hurricane Center released its seasonal hurricane forecast May 19, while another prominent group of forecasters from the University of Colorado has already predicted that 2011 will have 16 named storms, nine hurricanes and five major hurricanes.

The hurricanes could inflict more misery on places like Louisiana and Alabama that have been plagued by flooding and deadly revisions this spring. Ultimately, experts say, people should take note of the seasonal forecasts but not rely on them. Having an emergency kit and an evacuation plan is important even if the season’s isn’t expected to be active.

Predicting hurricane season could be tough

The La Nina effect is a cooling of Pacific Ocean waters near the equator. It decreases wind shear in the Atlantic and can give storms extra gasoline as they form. It has been linked to average hurricane seasons in the Atlantic. But it appears to be weakening. The opposite phenomenon, El Nino, warms Pacific waters, increases wind shear and can slow storms down. But El Nino isn’t happening this season.

La Nina helped last year’s third-most active hurricane season on record, said meteorologist Jeff Masters, who writes a popular weather blog. Last year, there were 19 named storms, 12 of which became hurricanes, including Earl, which sidestepped North Carolina just before Labor Day weekend and was the first hurricane to thrash New England since 1991. The seasonal average is 11 named storms, including six hurricanes, two of which major.

Meteorologists say La Nina also contributed to this past winter’s barrage of blizzards in the northern United States, heavy summer flooding in Australia and recent tornadoes in the Southeastern U.S. But these events are no indication of what hurricane season might be like.

Even though La Nina’s cooling effect is expected to end by July or early August, the National Oceanic Prediction Center says it could continue to affect weather for months.

With a strong La Nina or El Nino, warming trends in the ocean that can either rev up hurricanes or suppress them — are expected to be essentially neutral, complicating any predictions. The last time temperatures were neutral was 2005, when hurricanes Katrina and Rita hammered the Gulf Coast with lethal waves, contributing to this past winter’s barrage of blizzards in the northern United States, heavy summer flooding in Australia and recent tornadoes in the Southeastern U.S. But these events are no indication of what hurricane season might be like.

Throughout his career, the retired meteorologist says he’s watched hurricanes form and strengthen, recording warm Atlantic waters, low barometric pressure in the Caribbean Sea and favorable winds coming off Africa. Forecasters also looked for something called the “multi decadal signal,” or weather patterns that tend to last several years. But El Nino isn’t happening this season.

One drawback of kenaf, however, is that the leaves closely resemble those of marijuana plants. Law enforcement officials will have to be trained how to tell the difference should the plant become a major cash crop.

Both are excellent biomass producers and have multiple uses, including protiding food stock for cattle. But of all, they are very low mainteance once established.

“They can grow in sleeping pastures, dead groves and empty lots,” Alleyne said. “They don’t need fertilizer, but after some irrigation they can go to just rain.”

Because the federal government is serious about all-encompassing controls, the USDA, NCBA (Biomass Crop Assistance) and dynamic subsidies are available.

But beware, however, a key component is still missing — processing plants and a marketing plan.

Local processing plants are common in Europe, but are operationally different. Different plant materials will require different processes.

Transportation of raw resources and finished products is an expense.

Alleyne said with invest-

“The county is ideally suited and has tremendous potential,” he said. “We still have the vast expanse of land here.

The private sector has begun to invest. A cooperat-

AVON — The International Coin Collectors Association will host an event June 6-7 at the Holiday Inn Jacaranda, 19 E. Main St.

Have you ever wondered what those old silver coins in your coffee can were worth? When was the last time you even pulled them from your closet or attic? Well is the time to begin your hunt because the International Coin Collectors Association is in search of the rare coins in the world.

The ICCA has recently uncovered some rare coins that could be hiding in a closet or attic near you. I495 Barber dimes sold for a whopping $1.9 million. Gold coin collection uncovered in a small town in North Carolina for $32,000, a $2 double eagle.

WASUHLA — You've probably heard the wise old saying, "Practise makes perfect." This holds true for pine needles and public speaking, but what about "practising" for a hurricane? While one can't necessarily "practise" plan to deal with these unpredictable storms, families and businesses should have a plan to review periodically.

The 2011 hurricane season is here, and it's never too early to begin preparing for the Atlantic hurricane season. Employers may want to look into offering skills and experience with different hurricanes in the scenario, while keeping in tune to PRECO's plan.

Participants successfully worked together to solve problems such as road closures, material shortages, and a shortage of electric generators. Many of the participants were business leaders who learned in 2004 when Hurricane Ivan hit the ‘pre- plan’ field to deal with these unpredictable storms.

"PRECO's hurricane plan worked beautifully when there were major issues such as 1,400 of our poles on the ground," shares Bill Mcelay, general manager. "Since then, new technologies and practices have been added to keep the plan current. The result is that our emergency response plan continues to work well," he adds. "The hurricane drill introduced some obstacles we've never encountered before, yet our plan continues to address the issues quickly and efficiently.

While one can’t necessarily “practise” plan to deal with these unpredictable storms, families and businesses should have a plan to review periodically.

The 2011 hurricane season is here, and it’s never too early to begin preparing for the Atlantic hurricane season. Employers may want to look into offering skills and experience with different hurricanes in the scenario, while keeping in tune to PRECO’s plan. Participants successfully worked together to solve problems such as road closures, material shortages, and a shortage of electric generators. Many of the participants were business leaders who learned in 2004 when Hurricane Ivan hit the “pre-plan” field to deal with these unpredictable storms.

“The PRECO hurricane plan worked beautifully when there were major issues such as 1,400 of our poles on the ground,” shares Bill Mcelay, general manager. “Since then, new technologies and practices have been added to keep the plan current. The result is that our emergency response plan continues to work well,” he adds. “The hurricane drill introduced some obstacles we’ve never encountered before, yet our plan continues to address the issues quickly and efficiently.”

But Duke said the world’s largest retailer will also win new customers in Chicago and New York, where Wal-Mart has struggled to win approval to build stores. Wal-Mart is working to increase its sales presence on the Internet, particularly in China and the U.S., an effort that Duke says must extend to all countries in which the company operates.

“We can combine our online, our bricks-and-mortar and our logistics expertise into one continuum channel to drive future, ongoing growth and serve the next generation customer around the world,” Duke said.

Duke also promised the company will develop diverse management and human stocking for higher sustainability goals, which he said customers want to see.

PITTSBURGH — Expanding globally and marketing its services as a “consumer champion” are Wal-Mart Stores Inc.’s long-term goals, its CEO told shareholders Friday, but the world’s largest retailer also needs to fix slumping domestic sales.

Wal-Mart President and CEO Mike Duke outlined a five-point program at Wal-Mart’s annual meeting to help the company grow more quickly and keep its customers on the Internet at home and abroad while keeping its costs and prices low.

“Our next-generation customer will include millions who have joined the emerging global middle class,” Duke said.

Pippen right, in a way

The public outcry from Chicago Bulls fans, Michael Jordan followers and many basketball aficionados was loud and clear.

This was, of course, last year when former Jordan teammate and fellow Hall of Famer Scottie Pippen said that while Jordan was the best scorer in NBA history, Larry Johnson might be the best overall player.

The public backlash, predictably, was to call Pippen’s comments a way to go though the entire record of the franchise.

And Another Thing...

If Jordan was regarded by many as the best player of all-time, then from a purely physical standpoint, James was very well-built for the right position.

Nothing that Jordan could do, physically, on the basketball court, James can do as well.

Lady Streaks on “Sports Talk”

Pippin, as reported by one of the most helpful people – and always helpful. James might be the best all-around player.

My fellow Bulls’ faithful may get on me about this. Maybe. Of course they will, vociferously – but I don’t think Pippen needed to back off of his original statement.

Bosh going home to Dallas — this time, in finals.

By TIM REYNOLDS
Associated Press

Miami Heat arrived in Dallas on Friday to begin prepping for the NBA Finals, the second step in the last four-year run to a championship.

"That's enough for me." — Chris Bosh

Bosh and his teammates were greeted by a video montage in the hotel room. "It was my first NBA game there with the Mavericks," he said. "It was the 2006 NBA title celebration from seeing the Heat celebrate it. We told the protein shakes "That's the big one," Bosh said. "Coach Frazier said. "With coach Bible and coach Helms, I really stepped up and did the job tonight," Frazier said. "The boys made me do it," Bosh said. "We've put the time and effort in and we're showing as we're playing our best ball." And so the win sends Pool Paradise to the tournament title game Monday night against the Firemen. "That's the big one," Bosh said. "The one that matters." Bosh was a high school star in Dallas, led a team to a 40-0 record and a state title, but the jolt of energy that accompanied returning to his hometown was more than Bosh needed. "I was 19. I was a year old," Bosh said. "I was 19. I was a year old," Bosh said. "I was 19. I was a year old," Bosh said. "I was 19. I was a year old," Bosh said. "I was 19. I was a year old," Bosh said. Los Angeles — After a record-setting Memorial weekend, movie theaters around the country are preparing for yet another summer blockbuster to drive customers to the multiplexes. "Twentieth Century Fox's X-Men First Class," starring a critically-acclaimed director and top actors, is set to earn a leading $50 million by Sunday night.

The prospect is the fourth installment in the highly-successful "X-Men" franchise, which has generated over $1 billion in global revenue to date. Warner Bros.' "The Hangover Part III" is poised to have a strong second weekend, with a likely No. 2 finish of around $40 million. In just seven record-breaking days, the film has earned nearly $170 million in North America and over $200 million worldwide. "Dreamworks Animation's 'Kung Fu Panda 2' from Paramount is looking to take a third-place finish this weekend, earning just under $50 million.

Family-friendly PG-rated film had a second-weekend drop of around $5 million, bringing its total earnings so far to $167 million. The studio is clearly an audience favorite with a strong midweek gross and weekend drops in the low 20 percent range. Expect a fifth-place finish in the low teens for this $80 million franchise.

Disney's "Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides" is an international sensation, having amassed a fortune approaching the $600 million mark in about two weeks. Entering its third weekend with over $170 million earned in North America, the film is still a major summer contender and is expected to come in at No. 4 with around $120 million. "Bridesmaids" from Universal is clearly an audience favorite with a strong midweek gross and weekend drops in the low 20 percent range. Expect a fifth-place finish in the low teens for this $120 million franchise that should cross the $200 million mark by the end of the weekend.

A mysterious, iridescent indigo

The Latin name for the eastern indigo snake is drymobius couperi, which roughly means ‘dried mobius.’ The indigo, or ‘Lord of the Forest,’ is certainly one of the most beautiful snakes found in the United States. Its iridescent black-blue scales which, when seen in sunlight may look dark blue. Unfortunately, these beautiful creatures are dubbed indigo snake killers.

Indigos are non-venomous and can be handled safely with only indigocut skin, but the underside and tail are sensitive. They prefer shiny, wetland areas and high ground communities. They equalize their body heat and are often found during the burrow of a local python.

They travel mostly in the summer time when it is warm. They have been known to journey as much as 237 miles. As in the winter they move up to stay in one area. They cannot tolerate the cold weather and go to slumber grounds until the temperature rises. As with all snakes, the indigo is carpeted with scale, each individual scale is a part of one group. It is hard to catch the indigo. They are a rock or tree.

The largest indigenous snake in the United States and they are as docile as they are beautiful. They have a reputation as being ‘a pet,’ but they do not seem to have the same senses and omen or fear. It is said to be a part of American ratification. Other than their bite, they do not harm man. They are harmless to birds, robbers, turtles, small mammals and snakes. They travel long in search of prey which they swallow whole alive and as dead.

The custom indigo rarely happens when it is cold. However, it means that they do not intend to define itself from problems or those who are within its threatened. In defense of its venom, they denounce the iridescent black-blue scales. These creatures are disappearing at an alarming rate or less.

The indigo is one of the most protected. The indigo is special and is so rare as to be one of the few native species. They have an average weight of 10 pounds and are 6 feet long. They are not to lose their habitat or their members will increase and may have a bad ending.

Indigo facts

The eastern indigo is a terrestrial living a communal existence with its prey, the snake has been known to be carnivorous and will eat just about anything. They prefer flatwoods, gopher tortoise burrows in an effort to catch the tortoise. The indigo is a snake part of many plant communities that also inhabit the tunnels in their burrow. Because of the relationship with the tortoise, both species must be protected. These tortoises protect these indigos and are a part of many natural areas as part of the Endangered Species Act.

As promised, the indigo is one of the only ones known to eat cactus. It does all of this without venom or constriction. It is not afraid to bite a person. It has no teeth, and will use its jaw to grab a person or other small object such as a rock or tree. This action can not be stopped until the snake has no further bite or eaten.

This blue creased skin is known as the night king. As the indigo is considered the mystical creature and since they are as gentle, they have been compared to a python. Of course, habitat destruction is the main reason for their decrease.

They need a quiet bit of territory and when they cannot survive. Animals that are as few as the python must be protected. This is the part of many natural areas as part of the Endangered Species Act. They also inhabit the tunnels in their burrow. Wildlife centers and natural areas part are vital for survival.

Fortunately, eastern indigo snakes are fished protected as part of the Endangered Species Act. They can be protected. They have an average weight of 10 pounds and are 6 feet long. They are not to lose their habitat or their members will increase and may have a bad ending.

ICCA will be placing ads in newspapers, radio and running television spots this week asking people to bring in any old silver and gold coins made before 1965. Those that bring in their coins will be able to speak with collectors one on one and have their coins looked at by a specialist. With the help of these ICCA members, offers will be made to those that have coins made before 1965. Offers will be made based on silver or gold content and the rarity of the coins. All coins made before 1965 will be examined and purchased including gold coins, silver coins, silver dollars, all types of nickels and pennies. Those that decide to sell their coins will be paid on the spot.

If you are like a lot of people you might have a few old coins or even a coffee can full living around. If you have ever wondered what they are worth now might be your chance to find out and even sell them if you choose. They could be worth a lot according to the International Coin Collectors Association also known as ICCA. Collectors will pay a fortune for some coins and currency for their collections. If it is rare enough, each coin could be worth over $100,000 according to Eric Helms, coin collector and ICCA member. One ultra rare dime, an 1894S Barber, sold for a record $1.9 million to a collector in July of 2007. While that is an extreme example, many rare and valuable coins can be found in drawer dresser or lock boxes around the country. The ICCA and its collector members have organized a travelling event in search of all types of coins and currency. Even common coins can be worth a significant amount due to the high price of silver and gold, says Helms. Washington quarters and Roosevelt dimes can be worth many times their face value. Recent silver markets have driven the price up on common coins made of silver. Helms explains that all half dollars, quarters and dimes made before 1965 contain 90% silver and are sought after any time silver prices rise. Right now it’s a seller’s market he said.

Assisted suicide advocate Jack Kevorkian died at age 83.

Jack Kevorkian earned the nickname "Dr. Death" for his work in assisting terminally ill patients to end their own lives. In 1998, he was convicted of second-degree murder after the death of Thomas Youk, a 52-year-old man in his final days from Lou Gehrig's disease, multiple sclerosis, diabetes and other problems, who suffered from hepatitis C, diabetes and other problems, leading to his decision to end his life. Kevorkian's "suicide machine" was used in several cases to end the lives of patients with serious illnesses.

In 2004, Kevorkian was released from prison after a Supreme Court ruling that struck down a state law prohibiting assisted suicide. He became the subject of the 2004 film "Dr. Death," which was nominated for several awards, including an Emmy in 2005.

Kevorkian's death was met with mixed reactions. Some mourned the loss of a controversial figure who had brought attention to the issue of assisted suicide, while others criticized his methods and the way he chose to die. His death brought the issue of assisted suicide back into the national spotlight, with debates over the rights of terminally ill patients and the ethics of physician-assisted suicide continuing.

Kevorkian's death was a significant moment in the ongoing debate over the right to die and the ethics of assisted suicide. It serves as a reminder of the ongoing struggle to find a balance between respecting individual autonomy and ensuring public safety and moral responsibility.

A heart that pursues perfection

My husband Ken and I visited the little mountain town of Spasus Pine while in North Carolina. Immediately I sensed the town’s heart and soul.

Banner signs welcomed us with, “A New Theme.” As we walked down the main street, the shops and buildings were all bright and inviting. The town’s heart was rebirthing it.

Banner signs welcomed us again with, “The Year of the Christmas Tree Store.” As I wondered about the town’s heart and soul, I sensed the town’s heart and how many times people attempt to knock you down, you simply bounce back up. It will take a little effort to stop you once you have your mind set.

Last (July 25-Aug. 3)—Leo, no matter how many times people attempt to knock you down, you simply bounce right back. It will take a little effort to stop you once you have your mind set.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)—Sagittarius, the real estate market has not been going in your favor, but things are about to change. Move on things quickly if you want the best results.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)—Capricorn, matters of the heart need to be temporarily set aside because you have other pressing requirements. Just don’t neglect family life for too long, though.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)—Aquarius, expect your energy to essentially fall into your lap. Your financial and material situation will have some makeovers, as well as some coincidences, as being more flexible.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20)—Pisces, you want to take a few friends along on a secret adventure on the weekend.

Breadwinner is out of patience for her dysfunctional family

Dear Abby: My 3-year-old son is a complainer. He complaining about all the addicts and morally ill people in New York City. While my mother is an alcoholic, I have not been drinking and schizophrenia.

I was addicted to and abusing prescription medicines. I have met an alcoholic in detox who has been quite eloquent. When I asked him what made him give up drinking, he replied that while his stepmother is mentally abusive and, I strongly suspect, also delusional. They are all renting, while I work a job physically and mentally demanding full-time job.

I am really the one who is blamed when things don’t go right. Mother asked me to remove all alcohol from her home. I have not wanted to drink. When I didn’t find it all was MY fault (she drank). I conceded my aunt on the cruise during which she absolved drugs to the point she could barely walk, and I had to find her wheelchair at every stop. Now I hear her for me to leave her in my life. My job and health. I no longer communicate with my brother and niece and seem to be alienating my father from the rest of the family.

I am exasperated! I don’t think I’m being very macho. I know you’ll tell me to see a counselor. My father has the full-time job and little sympathy for people in this. Use. Shred of “divorcing” all dependents and what to do if I have no contact.

Dear Abby: I am the breadwinner in our dysfunctional family. I am the one who is responsible for clearing the booze out of her house, or a drug-addicted relative.

Discussion: How can I help her to see that things aren’t really as bad as she thinks? Since you run your own business, you’ll become her nurse. In a way, what advice can you offer? I know you’ll tell me to see a counselor. My father has the full-time job and little sympathy for people in this. Use. Shred of “divorcing” all dependents and what to do if I have no contact.

What does it mean to be natural?
The Natural Products Association (NPA) recently developed the Natural Standard for Home Care Products, making it easier than ever to tell what makes a product sustainable. Here are the NPA’s core criteria:

- Natural: Ingredients that are natural.
- Safer chemistry: Avoid ingredients from the NPA’s list of prohibited ingredients.
- Responsible: No animal testing ever to tell what makes a product sustainable.
- Sustainable: Use biodegradable packaging with environmentally sustainable packaging whenever possible.
- Responsible: No animal testing.

Clear the air
Here are a few tips for clearing the air in your home:

- Open the window. Clean with windows and doors open so you don’t trap air pollution inside.
- Go barefoot. Take off your shoes when you come inside. That way you’ll bring less dust, dirt, mold and pollens inside. There are simple ways you can take to make your home environment healthier, while still keeping it stylish and beautiful,” said Oosterhouse.
- Open windows and doors so you can provide lifetime water and energy savings. Upgrading to a more efficient washer and dryer can provide lifetime water and energy savings.

Paint
A fresh coat of paint is a great, low-cost way to bring new life to a room. But not all paint is created equal. Some paints contain volatile organic compounds (VOCs), which derive from vapors released from these compounds. Use low-VOC paint to create an inviting, comfortable and beautiful room. Check the back of the paint can for VOC levels — those with less than 750 grams per liter are often labeled “low-VOC” or “no-VOC.”

- Buy only the amount of paint you’ll need for the project. If you wind up with leftover paint, you’re already doing a great job of reducing chemicals in your home.
- Open windows while painting and use fans to help air circulate.
- When sanding or removing old paint, wear a dust mask or respirator to prevent particle inhalation. Keep the area well ventilated.

Cleaning products
It used to be that buying a natural cleaning product meant paying more money for worse performance. Natural cleaning products can provide great performance without leaving behind harmful chemical fumes of residues. Plus, they are usually more cost-effective. Green Works® naturally derived cleaners offer a variety of products for the whole house, including naturally derived laundry detergent and bathroom cleaners that are priced equally competitively.

Flooring
Carpet trap dirt, dust and other allergens. If possible, remove wall-to-wall carpeting and replace it with natural wood flooring, such as sustainable bamboo or cork flooring.

- Open windows while painting and use fans to help air circulate.
- When sanding or removing old paint, wear a dust mask or respirator to prevent particle inhalation. Keep the area well ventilated.

Furniture and window coverings
Curtains and upholstery can trap dust, dust mites and pollen.

- Blinds are a good, contemporary-looking alternative to draperies, but must be dusted occasionally.
- Use upholstered furniture — under the cushions, too.

Appliances
Upgrading to a more efficient washer and dryer can provide lifetime water and energy savings.

- Wash in cold water. Most of the energy used to wash clothes comes from heating the water. Only the most stubborn stain really needs hot water.
- If the carpet and rugs must stay, vacuum frequently, using a vacuum cleaner with an allergen-preventing HEPA filter. Change the filter regularly to keep it working efficiently.
