Officer Booker, an investigator with the Florida Division of State Fire Marshal, worked 21 cases last month. She made one arrest and has several more pending. She also trains diligently twice a day.

“...Of course, she gets a treat each time she finds fire accelerant,” said Booker, a grand daughter of former Florida State Fire Marshal Edward McCollum. She reinforced her skills with at least two training sessions per day.

In 13 southwest central Florida counties, with a concentration in Desoto, Hardee and Polk counties, Officer Booker bobs her head to signal that she has found a fire accelerant on the floor during a training exercise Wednesday in Avon Park Fire Department’s ‘burn building.’ Detective Jeff Batz with the Florida Fire Marshal’s Office Training and Investigation Section has been training the two of them to train and become a team, which he reinforces each day with at least two training sessions per day.

SEBRING — A new observance is coming to the City on the Circle. At 12:15 p.m. Wednesday, Sebring Mayor John Shoop will be downtown to officially declare the inaugural White Cane Safety Day in Highlands County.

The ceremony will be an official recognition of local residents who are living with vision impairment or loss. It will be the second time Shoop will have voiced the proclamation. He also read it at last Tuesday’s city council meeting.

The white cane in our society has become one of the symbols of a blind person’s ability to come and go on his own,” Shoop said.

Although it will be the first time the observance will be recognized in Sebring, this year will mark 50 years since it was established. The joint resolution of Congress was first approved in October of 1964.

Wednesday will begin with a luncheon at Dee’s Restaurant on Ridgewood Drive. That will feature a speaker on issues of interest to those who are visually impaired. A number of products that help people deal with their particular issue also will be displayed — including magnifiers, talking clocks and other devices.

At noon, the group will walk to The Circle to hear the proclamation. There also will be some demonstrations for fully-sighted individuals to learn more about obstacles faced by those with vision problems.

“We have some simulator goggles people can try to see what it’s like,” said Pam Elders, the local representative of Lighthouse Mainsail and one of the organizers of the event. The goggles can be adjusted to replicate vision problems such as macular degeneration and glaucoma.

Some blindfolds also will be offered for those who want to try being totally non-sighted. “We also do some other demonstrations, such as how can visually impaired people tell the different denominations of money in their wallet,” she said.

Elders became a local representative of the Sarasota-based Lighthouse group after discovering the organization while dealing with her macular degeneration issue.

Since that time she has established a group for low vision individuals in Highlands County known as Red Cane Club. They meet the third Thursday of each month at the Highlands Community Christian Church on New Life Way.

Locally, the Handicapped Americans Love of Life Organization also offers a low-vision support group that meets monthly and features different speakers talking about low-vision issues.

HALLO and The Lighthouse have partnered to help stage the downtown event. Those wanting additional information on the event may call Elders at 863-634-9280.

Sue?” Marshall said. At 4 p.m. Thursday, Marshall arrived with fellow Special STARS members Ralph Meyers, Bill Sobczak and Eva Monk and presented Reid with the bike.

Reid, though she was smiling at the new bike and enjoyed taking it for a test drive around her residence, was short with words: “I like it,” she said.

Marshall said the ordeal proved how highly Avon Park’s citizens thought of Reid and how they could come together when a member of their community was hurting.

USDA citrus prediction surprisingly good

By BARRY FOSTER News-Sun Correspondent

SIBERING — The numbers are out and local officials are calling this year’s citrus crop prediction “optimistic,” citing good news considering the dissastrous forecasts that were made earlier in the year.

The figures from the U.S. Department of Agiculture set the initial forecast for the 2014– 2015 season at 108 million boxes, up from last year’s total of 104.4 million.

Early mild weather varied from just below normal to a record breaking 35 million boxes with valencias projected to bring in 36 million.

Grapefruit was set at 15 million boxes, with tangors at 2.9 million and tangelos at 90,000 boxes. Reactive citrus growers, who had gathered to hear the report Friday at noon, were mixed.

“I think there were a lot more people who expected the trees to do better in the mid-90s than what we got,” said Ray Royce, Highlands County Citrus-

In search of the moderate Muslim

Laura Ware

Learning to live with bears

I had a column planned for this week. I was even writing sentences for it in my head this morning, a sure sign that I have a column that will work “work” being defined as, “something I can get 600 words written about”. I was good to go. Then I got into a spirited discussion with a friend.

The topic? Muslims. Oh, to be more specific, moderate Muslims as opposed to the radical kind we hear so much about on the news.

My friend’s contention? There is no such thing as a moderate Muslim. They are ALL radical. By following the Quran, which contains verses that appear to call for the death of anyone not a Muslim, they are all extremists who want the rest of us converted or dead.

Vainly, I pointed out that judging a large group of people by the actions of a few was unfair. That there were surely moderate Muslims out there who just wanted to live their lives and raise their families in relative peace. Muslims who were just as appalled by the actions of groups like ISIS as we are.

“Give me one,” my friend demanded.

Well, I admit he had me there for the moment. Out of all the Muslims I know, I could not point to any who were Muslim, at least to my knowledge.

But I find it difficult to believe that everyone who claims to be a Muslim wants me or others like me dead. Hence my contention that a moderate form of the religion exists.

Now, before you jump to any conclusions, I am not saying the Quran is the word of God. Given the chance, I would study the Bible with a Muslim and introduce him or her to Jesus. Just as I would with any other non-Christian.

But that doesn’t mean I think all Muslims are evil people.

Let me point something out — there are factions of the Muslim faith, just as you see different groups of people calling themselves Christians. ISIS and others like them have killed large numbers of other Muslims that didn’t agree with their fanatical view. Why would they do that if they all believed the same thing?

“But Laura,” some of you might be asking, “what about the passages in the Quran that demand a believer to kill or convert non-Muslims? Doesn’t that prove the point?”

First off, I have never read the Quran. I would be willing to bet some chocolate that most of you who claim to be Muslims believe the same thing? I would be asking, “what about the passages in the Quran that demand a believer to kill or convert non-Muslims? Doesn’t that prove the point?”

Finally, bears cannot be relocated, they have to be killed. A sure sign that I have a column that will work. That’s how I define success. Efforts to protect endangered species have been wildly successful. The good news is that the panther and the Florida black bear have increased their numbers.

The bad news is that there is very little remote land left where they can go — yelling, banging pots and pans, making sure the bear has a clear escape route, then make as much noise as you can. If you have fruit trees, pick the ripe fruit, and don’t scatter bird seed. If you have pet dishwashers, use them. Put on a lid on the garbage can. It means securing it in the garage or high-duty shed. Bring in all pet dishes. Let me point something out — there are factions of the Muslim faith, just as you see different groups of people calling themselves Christians. ISIS and others like them have killed large numbers of other Muslims that didn’t agree with their fanatical view. Why would they do that if they all believed the same thing?

And everyone remember this — ISIS and their ilk don’t speak for any other religion – is evil. Don’t try to pin your unrighteous acts on God, you are the one responsible. Don’t go around giving him a bad name.

Open house, ‘green’ building tour today at Archbold

LAKE PLACID — A Tomoka Highlands Resident recently was charged in circuit court with contempt of court against civil suits involving unpaid loans and found her checkbook.

Shelagh Byatt, of In- digo Builders of Lake Placid Inc., had a first appearance with Circuit Court Judge Pe- ter Estrada Oct. 1. According to charging documents, she failed to provide tax returns as requested in a case in 2012. Byatt has been ac- cused of failing to re- turn or pay her taxes to the state in 2012, when she was vice-president of the gated community’s board of directors.

A 2012 investiga- tion by the Highlands County Sheriff’s Office found that, at that time, she had $914,000 in unpaid taxes.

Kevin D’Espies, at- torney for Byatt, al- legedly threatened to pay down the money to the truck and rounded the building.

Byatt, however, got away.

The suspect, a man in a truck, with one hitting the windshield, break- ing it. The suspect, however, got away.

A second witness, who slept in a down- stairs bedroom in the house, was awoken by the “nuckus,” report- ed to law enforce- ment as they sur- rounded the building.

Information also came out on Thursday that Sneed had pre- viously been arrested in August for alleged sexual assault against Abrams.

Sneed is current- ly being held with no bond at the Highlands County Jail on felony charges of homicide, aggravated assault and burglary.

Large dogs can be reached at 850-958-9150. Ext. SWIM or emailed at gswim@sun.com.

Hilary Swain, executive vice-president of Tomoka Highlands Station Inc., had a first appear- ance recently at the Tomoka Highlands Resident’s Attorney, Scott Leconey of Swain and Harris in Lake Placid- id, were unsuccessful. But the court re- ferrer in the firm, de- clared to comment since the matter is an open case.

D’Espies said that, according to his cli- ents, Byatt and her company had developed the communi- ty north of Lake Placid; she paid the company Lake June-in-Winter.

She had sold homes and properties to members of the commu- nity, but then she ran out of money, so she started borrowing- ing from residents, D’Espies said.

The investigation started that the people who had lent money had also bought their homes through her. Each person had re- ceived a promissory note from Byatt, agree- ing to pay back the full amount, plus 6 percent interest if paid by an agreed date.

If she didn’t pay by that time, she would be charged with theft, reports said. The Sheriff’s Office investigation found that Byatt — then vice- president of the board of directors of the gated community — had not paid the outstanding loans at the time: $100,000 in March 2012, a 12 percent interest rate for six days, but not re- paid. $7,000 on March 26, 2012, with a promise to repay in six days, not but re- paid. $10,000 on April 3, 2012, to be paid in three days, but not re- paid. $10,000 on April 12, 2012 to be paid in two days, but not re- paid. $6,000 on June 8, 2012, to be paid in three days, not but re- paid. $5,000 on Aug. 10, 2012, due in one week, but not repaid. $23,000 on an unlist- ed date. A promisso- ry note was issued, but it was not repaid.

In an interview with a deputy sheriff, Byatt allegedly admitted to receiving the loans and issuing promisso- ry notes. She told the deputy, reports said, that the money was in helping her business, In- digo Builders, and not her personally. She had hoped she would be able to sell properties or speculate homes she owns in Tomoka Highlands and settle the loans so she could not get loans through a bank or a fi- nancial institution. She said she knew each of them and had either built their homes or sold homes to them.

By Jan. 9, 2013, the investigation showed Byatt had paid some creditors, but still owed $23,000 to four lessors, despite promising to pay them by December. Charges were filed by the Highlands County Sheri- n’s Office in March, 2013 but the state at- torney’s office determined the matter was not handled in a civil court.

The movie “Jerry Maguire” was released on Dec. 10, 1996. Released in 1996, the film stars Tom Cruise, Renee Zellweger and Cuba Gooding Jr.

Sports agent Jerry Maguire (Cruise) experiences a profound personal revelation at an industry conference in Miami Beach and publishes a mission statement entitled “The Things We Think and Do Not Say!” The pamphlet encourages his contemporaries to seek fewer clients, which, of course, correlates to less revenue for his company. In less than a week, Maguire’s communiqué transforms him into a pariah. He is fired by a former underling. His fianceé and all but one of his clients leave him, and he makes an emotional and dramatic departure, taking only a goldfish and a briefcase with him. And, oh yes, he even fires his plastic bag. A former single mother in accounting who was emotionally moved by Maguire’s mission statement. Holding high his plastic bag with his goldfish, Maguire says, “And now, as I ease out of the office that I helped build…” The business activity barely even passes as he departs. PIMCO founder Bill Gross recently jumped to Janus, leaving behind the firm he helped create. Rumors were that five top-ranking PIMCO officers said, basically, it’s either him or us. And so Gross separated from the Newport Beach, Calif. company, which manages some $2 trillion in assets. To date the move has cost PIMCO an estimated $23 billion in assets, with predictions that PIMCO could lose much more than that amount due to Gross’s separation from service.

Business conflicts happen. Even good partnerships can be complicated. Sometimes the founder of a firm, so integral to the company’s early success, gets pushed aside by younger associates. Often it’s because there’s little loyalty in the business world. And sometimes it happens because the firm founder is obstructive and refuses to view the company’s objectives and operations differently in the wake of new business paradigms.

One thing’s for sure: managing investments requires enormous flexibility. And one becomes married to utilizing a certain set of securities or a particular investment style at one’s own risk. Markets change, as do economic environments. Gross, known as the “Bond King,” had managed the firm’s flagship fund for 27 years. But major fund outflows caused many to question his oversight. Ten years ago, who would have thought that today’s moderate portfolios would some times comprise of 80 per cent equities and 20 percent fixed income instruments, with some types of equities acting more like bonds than bonds themselves? Managing money is infinitely more complicated than it was even five years ago, and a willingness to adapt and correct current policies is vital for success.

Streaks rock the house for huge homecoming win

BY DAVID DeGARDEL
News-Sun Correspondent

SEBRING — The Blue Streaks needed no more motivation than the fact that it was homecoming week. The score would show that Friday night as the Streaks toppled Tenoroc, 44-8.

Toni Jenkins’ 25-yard rushing run on Sebring’s first play from scrimmage set the offense up in good position. With the ball on Tenoroc’s 40-yard line, the Blue Streaks connected with Joey Piccione on a 5-yard pass for a score right off the play, taking a 9-0 lead.

Wildcats pull away from Devils with late rally

BY JAMES TAYLOR

WAUCHULA — The Avon Park Red Devils gave up 21 points in the fourth quarter to a 35-14 loss to the Hardee Wildcats at Wauclula High School.

The Red Devil defense struck first as Ahmaad Smith picked up Hardee’s second fumble of the night and jetted 20 yards for a touchdown and a 27-0 lead.

The Red Devils acquitted themselves well in the first three quarters but made mistakes on defense to let Hardee come back into the game.

The Red Devils are 7-1 and the Wildcats are 3-0.

J V Streaks a win away from third straight perfect season

BY JAMES TAYLOR
News-Sun Correspondent

SEBRING — The Sebring junior varsity Blue Streaks football team is on the verge of its third consecutive perfect season.

The Blue Streaks are 7-0 after winning 2-0 over the Fort Meade Miners on Thursday to improve to 4-0.

“We know that Fort Meade High School, like Frostproof, is (grades) 7-12,” said Sebring head coach Dustin Woods, “so a lot of their JV players are in seventh and eighth grade and a handful of seniors. Woods explained that the Streaks usually play Fort Meade on the bye week for the Miners’ season finale. Fort Meade would have a handful of varsity on their team to level the playing field.

“Then we played a rescheduled game on Wednesday and those players could not make it,” said Woods. “Hat’s off to Fort Meade, for sure.”

Sebring took a 7-0 lead midway through the first quarter on a 18-yard thundering run by James Bell through the rightguard. The Streaks increased their lead to 13-0 when Kyrree Watson caught a wide receiver screen pass from quarterback Jaason Bartman near the right sideline and ran 72 yards for the touchdown.

The onslaught continued in the second quarter as Al Robinson scored on a 10-yard run to make the score 20-0.

Special teams got involved in the action as the Blue Streaks blocked a punt and Billy Green scooped up the loose ball and returned it 13 yards for a touchdown and a 27-0 lead.

Humphrey joins IMSA to oversee Sebring and Atlanta sites

DAYTONA BEACH — The International Motor Sports Association has announced the addition of veteran motorsports executive Rick Humphrey in the newly created position of Vice President, IMSA Properties.

Humphrey, 46, will oversee the day-to-day operation of the three IMSA Properties: Road Atlanta in Braselton, Ga., Sebring International Raceway and the Chateau Élan Hotel & Conference Center. He will be based at Road Atlanta and will report to IMSA president and CEO Scott Atherton.

“As the TUDOR United SportCar Championship and all of our IMSA-sanctioned series continue to grow, we discovered a need for a day-to-day leader to oversee the experienced and talented staffs at each of our key properties in Braselton and Sebring,” said Atherton.

Humphrey’s career in motorsports began in 1993. He most recently served as Vice President of Zoom Motorsports, promoter of racing events at Barber Motorsports Park in Birmingham, Ala. Prior to that, Humphrey spent 14 years in various roles with the International Speedway Corporation (ISC).

“This is an outstanding opportunity to work at not one, but two of the most prestigious road and racing facilities in the world,” said Humphrey. “As we saw this year, both Sebring and Road Atlanta continue to have extremely loyal fans and draw massive crowds. My plan is to work with the talented and established staffs and build upon the success that all three facilities enjoy.”

Sebring International Raceway president and general manager Greg Lee and Chateau Élan Hotel & Conference Center general manager Scott B. Cooper said Humphrey will report to Atherton.

and it was successful on the ensuing kick as the Streaks got the ball right back and Brian Dickens scored from 13 yards out to make it 23-8. But the Streaks weren’t done in the half as freshman Brian Lane, making his first start, connected with homeroom candidate Javon Bridges for a 43-yard touchdown pass with 30 seconds left for a 13-0 lead at halftime. Five minutes into the third quarter, the Streaks scored again as Lane connected with Brian Berry for a 12-yard touchdown pass to put the Streaks’ commanding lead to an even greater 37-8. With nine minutes left to play in the game, Dante Carpenter caught a 12-yard touchdown pass to put the Streaks ahead to an additional 21-14 lead.

The Wildcat's scoring streak was concluded with a 10 yard touchdown and a 28-14 lead. The Red Devils still have this point of the season, and I thought we did that run and throw the ball. Among the Retro Boys, they did that run and throw the ball. The Red Devils' 10-yard line was covered by Hardee for the touchdown. Holley later scored his third touchdown of the game on a 1-yard run after an interception gave the Wildcats the ball inside the Red Devils' 10-yard line.

In all, the Wildcats ran for nearly 350 yards on 54 carries as Holley rushed for 178 yards on 27 carries. Parker Carlton rushed for 131 yards on 19 carries. For Avon Park, Council connected on 10 passes for 167 yards with one touchdown and two interceptions.

Ringling College art exhibit at Highlands MoTA

SEBRING — Ringling College of Art and Design will have an art exhibit on display at the Highlands Museum of the Arts from Oct. 10 through Feb. 7. Work by the exhibiting artists, who are faculty of the fine arts at the college, has been exhibited both nationally and internationally, and MoTA, along with the Highlands Art League and the Jarrett Family Foundation, have teamed up to bring it to Highlands County.

The exhibit provides a broad sampling of the range and variety of contemporary fine art practices across a spectrum of media, including printmaking, painting, sculpture, digital imagery and projection. This exhibit is presented by the Jarrett Family Foundation, which provides free admission to the Museum during this exhibit. MoTA also received support from the Sebring Community Tourism Development Council.

An Opening Reception is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 18 from 6-8 p.m. at MoTA. The artists will be in attendance to discuss their artwork with attendees. "With more and more art exhibits featured at MoTA, the Museum is becoming a very popular destination for visitors from outside the county, as well as local residents and school groups," said HAL President Don Elwell. "We are excited and proud to bring this caliber of art from renowned artists to Highlands County."

MoTA is at 351 W. Center Ave. in Downtown Sebring's Allen Altvater Cultural Center on the shores of Lake Jackson. It is one of the four buildings in the Highlands Art League Village, which also offers art classes, workshops and programs for children and adults, as well as a gallery and gift shop.

The deadline to apply for 2015 is November 15. Application information is available online at www.HighlandsArtLeague.org.

Pamplin Art Gallery for the annual Cornucopia Show Saturday. The 14th annual show sponsored by the Bartow Art Guild had 51 pieces featured in years past but still a robust display, said Martha Post of the league. The show is officially opened Monday and will remain on display at the Tea Room Library until Nov. 21. The artists’ reception is scheduled on Friday, Oct. 24. It will run from 5-7 p.m. That is also when the awards will be presented.

The juror for this year’s show is Alice V. Hansen, who is an active member of the Highlands Art League. Hansen is also a “Signature Member” of the Florida Watercolor Society. “It’s a pretty prestigious award,” Post said about Hansen status as a signature member. “You’re judged from among 600 to 700 artists.”

Hansen has also been the cover artist for the Keep Florida Beautiful magazine. In addition to that, she has won numerous awards at festivals in Florida and Alabama, plus her works appear in many corporate, public and private collections.

“I got Alice to judge our show,” said Pat Hier, who said Hansen was someone Janet King, a judge from previous years, mentioned. “I try to get a different judge that qualified every year.”

In addition, said Hier, she seeks judges who are not from the area, someone who does not really know the people participating. She said that does in order to avoid any potential conflict of favoritism.

Barrow’s Cornucopia art critiqued by Sebring’s Hansen

Nicole Hansen comments on a watercolor painting called “Pow Wow Dancer” by Dana Dodge. It is next to two wire pieces by Joe Lewis, the top called “Framed Oak” the bottom called “Oak Tree in Ring.”

Hansen critiqued the art last Saturday. Mostly a watercolor artist, she said, she emphasized the need for light and dark areas in paintings and to properly show the contrast of the work.

“I’m very impressed with all the paintings,” she said, before critiquing each of the pieces one by one. In “Pow Wow Indian,” for example, she emphasized how the artist was aware of the proportion and did the lines and the vertical Showings in it. Another painting by Dana Dodge, called “His Light Shines,” showed a painting of a man’s face in watercolor with lines over the front of his face. She enjoyed the rendering of that, she said.

“I like the droplets and it still comes out with a beautiful person underneath,” she said. “It does have just enough light and comes out with a fresh picture.”

Hansen, of Sebring, is a signature member of the Florida Watercolor Society and a juried member of the Highlands Art League. Her specialties are marine subjects and life and scenes that chronicle her travels.

A few dozen people heard critiques of the artwork on display at the Pamplin Art Gallery for the annual Cornucopia Show Saturday.

Common Poisons, Part 2

Last time we talked about some common things in your home that are potentially dangerous to your pet. Unfortunately, there are many more things we can discuss. We will cover a few more common ones today. But, as I mentioned last time, the Pet Poison Helpline app is a good resource.

Rodenticides are often blocks or pellets. They are made to attract the rats and mice, but this cannot be formed. Many rodenticides are what are called second generation anticoagulants which means that they are stronger, but the signs may not be seen for three to seven days after exposure. Due to their potency, treatment must be for longer than with the first generation poisons. Early signs of exposure to this toxin can be subtle—lethargy, decreased appetite. As the inability to clot progresses, the signs will depend on where the most bleeding is — chest, abdomen, joints, etc.

Depending on the severity of the exposure to this toxin by your veterinarian. Unfortunately, there are many manufacturers of rodenticides, so it is important to save the packaging in case an animal is exposed so that you will have the active ingredient. Most rodenticides are anticoagulants. They kill by decreasing vitamin K availability so that clotting factors cannot be formed.

Keep toxins out of reach of pets. Keep medications in containers and keep track of any pills that drop on the floor. Signs, a blood transfusion, intra- venous fluids and supportive care will be needed. Oral vitamin K is needed to counteract the effects of the poison. There is another rodenticide called bromethalin.

from either of these species. Non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) are very commonly used these days. If used properly these drugs will decrease inflammation. However, there are some side bad effects that can occur such as decreased blood flow to the kidneys, decreased mucous production and gas formation. Ibuprofen and naproxen are two examples of these drugs. If animals are showing signs from these drugs, supportive care may be necessary. Veterinary versions of NSAIDs are slightly more safe, but do still have some potential for side effects. Antidepressants (such as Prozac, Zoloft and amphetamines (for example Ritalin) can cause hyperactivity, muscle tremors, elevated heart rates and need to be treated with supportive care. Do not induce vomiting. Sleep aids have a rapid onset of signs and can last for 10-12 hours. They can cause sedation, muscle uncoordination, vomiting and diarrhea. In some instances, instead of sedation there is hyperactivity and aggression.

Bloodwork may be necessary depending on the animal’s condition. A reversal agent is available. Heart medications can be dangerous also. Depending on the medication, the signs may be mild or severe. Some of the drugs may cause a slowing of the heart rate or a decrease in blood pressure. If your dog or cat is expiring from heart medications, please be sure to call your veterinarian for advice.

Silica gel packets have a low toxicity, but if enough are ingested they may cause an obstruction. Food odorizer packets contain iron, and is potentially toxic to animals. Bleach is a gastrointestinal irritant. The ulcer blisters that are available now are very corrosive. Do not cause a stomach or intestinal obstruction. Your dog is your family member and it’s only natural to want to enjoy her company all the time, but take her along everywhere possible. However, the decision to travel with a pet — particularly on an extended road trip — is one that requires a great deal of consideration. There are several different ways to approach the trip, and it’s important to review your pet’s temperament before loading Fido or Fifi up in the car, and all of them involve ensuring your pet’s ultimate comfort and well-being.

What is your pet’s temperament? If your pet is easy-going and adaptable, taking her along is an easydecision. However, if your pet is nervous, anxious, grumpy, or skittish when it comes to new places or new people, she may not be a great candidate for a trip.

Is the trip one your pet will enjoy? Make sure that your travel plans include staying somewhere your pet will be comfortable, and doing things she’ll enjoy. For example, if your pet loves an outdoor adventure, a destination with hiking or river romping will be right up her alley.

Is your pet in good health? If your pet is sick, pregnant, or injured, it’s best to stay home until she is feeling well. After all, she may need more care than you can give her while you’re travel-ning, and since she can’t talk, there’s no real way of knowing her actual level of discomfort. If she is making a great deal of discomfort may even cause a change in her temperaments, and since you can’t give her coaching can help her become happy-go-lucky furry friend suddenly isn’t such a pleasant travel companion.

If you plan to travel through different states, there are many ways to alleviate temperament issues. Right training and coaching can help desensitize your pet to the things that upset her and help her become comfortable with traveling. Be aware that most of these techniques can take time, and if you want your pet to be a happy traveler, you must be patient and go at her pace.

When a man says sex is "too much trouble," it's usually because he's having trouble performing. The problem may be his sex drive has diminished or it could be physical. It won't be resolved unless he's willing to have a frank conversation with his doctor. For your sake, urge him to do it.

DID YOU KNOW?
‘Jane the Virgin’ cuts to the chaste

BY JACQUELINE CUTLER © Zap2it

Given the title and the focus on an actual pregnant virgin, it’s understandable that some will assume The CW’s delightful show, premiering Monday, Oct. 13, is sacrilegious.

Rather, Jane (Gina Rodriguez) is a chaste young woman. She and her boyfriend are waiting for marriage, and she lives by her grandmother’s lesson about abstinence.

“She is studying to be a teacher and has dreams of being a writer but works as a mermaid,” Rodriguez says during an interview in Beverly Hills, Calif.

At her annual gynecological exam, Jane assumes she is getting a pap smear. A doctor, who isn’t her regular physician, whose sperm was used is now sterile because of an illness. He and his wife, not the nicest woman, desperately want a baby. The embryo Jane is carrying is their only hope.

Understandably, Jane’s finace is less than thrilled with the predicament. The series is set up to follow Jane’s relationships with her mom, grandmother, the couple trying to conceive, and fiance.

Based on a Venezuelan telenovela, showrunner Jennie Snyder Urman decided the main character had to have a strong moral code.

“When this show was brought to me, it became very specific in terms of who this woman is, what the specific relationship that she has to her mother, who had her at 16, and how that would inform her decision, and how she’s growing up with her grandmother who is religious,” Urman says at a press conference. “So all of that does kind of create a character who I wanted to be very moral, and whatever decision you have, you can be moral, but she’s coming from a very specific set of circumstances. And I want you to feel that in the character going forward.”

Jane is Latina, and the grandmother sometimes speaks Spanish. Rodriguez notes that the story is universal. This situation could, conceivably, happen to any woman.

“They are strong women and every culture has them,” Rodriguez says.

Jane could have an abortion, “but all we know is she will keep the baby,” she says. “She wants her plan to keep going.”

With her grandmother and mom’s support, Jane will keep that plan going, and keep it real. Unlike much on TV, Rodriguez says, “We are not vampires. We are not wolves. And it is a real story.”

“Gazillionaire,” www.youtube.com/user/SPIEGLEWORLDTV

Launched in September, this new web series from Spiegel World TV chronicles the beginnings of the wildly successful Las Vegas cabaret variety show “Absinthe,” ensconced by the gold-toothed lounge lizard Gazillionaire (Voki Kalfayan) and his assistant, Penny Pibbets (Anais Thomassian). The very funny trailer tells of how Penny and Gaz became partners and of Gaz’s envy of Neil Patrick Harris.

“Microbrew Madness,” www.travelchannel.com/tv-shows/microbrew-madness

With the proliferation of microbreweries over the last 20 years, interest in craft brews is at an all-time high, hence this new web series from Travel Channel. In the 16 episodes, hosts Lori Griffis (“Girls Gone Bayou”), Australian pro golfer Ewan Porter, Olivia Speranza and Ryan Van Duzer travel the country, sample product and try to determine which craft brewery is the best. In the end, viewers get to vote on their favorites — without the benefit of getting to try any of the beers.

OF “SIMPLY LAURA” ON COOKING CHANNEL

You grew up around your father’s New Jersey restaurants. Is that what sparked your interest in food prep?
The bistro sparked my interest in cooking in front of people … I always felt like I was in the back of the kitchen somewhere and everybody was out front and I was sort of alone all the time. I wanted to figure out a way that I could cook in front of people, so we decided to make the kitchen exposed and all I had was a glass window that separated the dining room from the kitchen, and that’s where people could interact with me as I was cooking. People were asking what was going into their dishes and it just became this really exciting part of the restaurant, and I loved that. I loved that people were so interested in what I was cooking. They somehow started looking at food that they were ordering differently.

Are you still doing the Web series?
I am. “Laura in the Kitchen,” which is my Web series, is sort of the heart that started it all, and I think it’s going to be incredible for all those people who have been with me for the past 4 1/2 years to see this transition. So many of my followers — I have over … 1.3 million subscribers — I think they’ve been with me for so long, every day I get thousands … of comments, and in those comments I constantly hear, “You need to be on television. We want more time with you instead of just an episode.” So this is the answer. “Simply Laura” is the answer.

"There are two sides, at least, to every story," notes Sarah Treem, a writer and executive producer of “The Affair.”
Premiering Sunday, Oct. 12, the very adult Showtime drama series offers both “his” and “hers” views of the illicit liaison of two people married to others. Noah (Dominic West, “300”) is a schoolteacher, parent and would-be novelist long wed to his college girlfriend Helen (“ER” alum Maura Tierney), with whom he’s summering in the Hamptons when he meets Alison (Ruth Wilson, “Saving Mr. Banks”).

She’s a waitress trying to move past a personal tragedy, made tougher by her strained marriage to Cole (“Dawson’s Creek” and “Fringe” veteran Joshua Jackson), who’s trying to keep his family’s ranch going amid financial problems.

“We’re really interested in telling a story in a kind of ‘Rashomon’ structure,” Treem says, “because I think storytelling in general is driven by perspective. We wanted to tell a story that was going to kind of capitalize on a different perspective, so we were thinking about how to structure a story like that, and we thought a love affair would be the way to do it.”

Even then, Treem – reteamed on “The Affair” with Hagai Levi, previously her collaborator on HBO’s “In Treatment” – believes the new series depicts “a love affair on steroids. When you’re having an affair, you’re never privy to what your lover is thinking, even if you’re married to them. But when you’re having an (extramarital) affair, you don’t even have access to what your lover is experiencing when you’re not around. There’s this whole other world that they inhabit that you never get to see, so for the characters, that felt like kind of the richest situation to put them in.”

For actor West, signing up for “The Affair” was as simple as being in London with his over-energetic children on a rainy day when the offer came: “They said, ‘Would you be interested in doing a show set in Montauk where you have an affair with a girl on the beach?’ It’s what first sort of piqued my interest.”

Co-star Wilson’s approach to “The Affair” was a bit more involved, though she jokes, “Joshua and I have done numerous marriage counseling sessions.” She adds the story element of Alison and Cole’s loss prompted her to “treat it with integrity and serve it, so I did a lot of research — as I think Josh did — about grief.”

Jackson and Tierney have different challenges in “The Affair,” playing characters meant to be in the dark about … well, the affair. “I’m very content to know less,” Tierney maintains. “It’s really fun for me to not know what’s going to happen, and I don’t ask what’s going to happen. It’s liberating.”

PÂTRICE BERGERON: versatile with the puck

Head injuries are at the forefront of professional sports more than ever these days. And while much of the talk of concussions centers on football, hockey too has its share of such injuries. No one knows that better than Boston Bruins center Patrice Bergeron, who will take to the ice Wednesday, Oct. 15, on NBC Sports Network, when the Bruins visit the Detroit Red Wings. Bergeron is coming off his second 30-plus-goal season, one in which he led the team with 30, and helped propel the Bruins to the top of the Atlantic Division and Eastern Conference, as well as the Presidents’ Trophy.

After taking care of business in five games against the Red Wings in the Conference Quarterfinals of the Stanley Cup Playoffs, the Bruins succumbed to the Montreal Canadiens in seven, coming up short in their bid for a second Cup in three years. After overcoming a highly publicized concussion in 2008 and another in ’11, Bergeron appears to be in top form. He signed an eight-year, $52-million contract extension prior to the 2013-14 season, when Bergeron caught fire for the Bruins.

During Team Canada’s 2014 Olympic gold medal run, he played forward and helped the team win its second straight Olympic gold at Sochi, Russia. Bergeron remains a favorite for the 2018 Olympic team. Until then, hockey fans can expect to see him skating in Boston as the Bruins will look for another solid finish this season, one that won’t be interrupted by a work stoppage or Olympic play.

Who said that?

Identify the authors of the following quotes:

1) “I’m as nauseous as I’ve ever been. I have a terrible headache. My head is pounding. I feel like throwing up and I’m having trouble swallowing. And the beauty of it is, you want to feel like this every day.”

2) “I guess there is nothing that will get your mind off everything like golf. I have never been depressed enough to take up the game, but you get so sore at yourself you forget to hate your enemies.”

3) “What can I say? I just tip my hat and call the Yankees my daddy.”

4) “Many men go fishing all of their lives without knowing that it is not fish they are after.”

5) “If I knew it was worth that much after I missed it, I would’ve run after it.”

6) “A daily festival of human suffering.”

7) “Baseball has the great advantage over cricket of being sooner ended.”

8) “Golf is a game whose aim is to hit a very small ball into an even smaller hole, with weapons singularly ill-designed for the purpose.”

9) “Like they say, it ain’t over till the fat guy swings.”

If it seems Sarah Lancaster has been all over television lately ... well, yes.

The former “Chuck” and “Everwood” co-star just finished a multiple-episode arc on Lifetime’s “Witches of East End,” and she’s made movies lately for that network (“The Preacher’s Mistress”), UP (“Love Finds You in Sugarcreek”) and Hallmark Channel (“Looking for Mr. Right”). She stays in the Hallmark family by starring with Cameron Mathison in “Along Came a Nanny” Sunday, Oct. 12, on Hallmark Movies & Mysteries.

Mathison plays the nanny who comes along – actually a police detective working undercover to probe burglaries in a neighborhood – and Lancaster portrays an actual caretaker of children. The actress and her attorney husband employ a nanny for their 3-year-old son, but she based much of her performance on someone else.

“I do have a nanny, but when I’m home, I like to do it,” the pleasant Lancaster says, explaining she based her “Nanny” character Jessie “off of one of my best friends who happens to be named Jessie. She also happens to have just gotten her Masters degree in child psychology; she worked with children with special needs for a really long time.”

Grateful for so much work in made-for-cable movies, Lancaster likes that the schedules suit her family life.

“It’s the ideal situation right now. I was obviously pregnant during ‘Chuck,’ and I went back about three months after Oliver was born to finish Season 5. He’s only going to be a baby boy for so long, and it’s only three or four weeks to do one of these movies.”

Lancaster also has a major big-screen project now, appearing in the just-opened “The Judge” with Robert Downey Jr. (also a producer of the film) and Robert Duvall.

“That was one of the best days of my professional life, for sure,” Lancaster recalls of landing the role of Downey’s soon-to-be-ex-wife. She notes he is “wearing a lot of hats on this, but he’s really long time.”

For multi-cam shows, Lancaster says, explaining she based her “Nanny” character Jessie “off of one of my best friends who happens to be named Jessie. She also happens to have just gotten her Masters degree in child psychology; she worked with children with special needs for a really long time.”

BEST TV SITCOM MARRIAGES

Lucy and Ricky Ricardo (“I Love Lucy,” CBS, 1951-57) Lucy’s endless schemes to insinuate her way into husband Ricky’s show-business world may have frustrated him frequently – leaving her with “some splainin’ to do” – but in the end, he was virtually always bemused.

Rob and Laura Petrie (“The Dick Van Dyke Show,” CBS, 1961-66) At the time, the union of comedy writer Rob and capri-wearing wife Laura was one of the most modern depictions of marriage yet.

Bob and Emily Hartley (“The Bob Newhart Show,” CBS, 1972-78) This Chicago psychologist and schoolteacher had a witty marriage of equals.

Cliff and Clair Huxtable (“The Cosby Show,” NBC, 1984-92) Lessons were learned constantly in the Huxtable household, between the heads of it as well as among the youngsters.

Al and Peg Bundy (“Married ... With Children,” Fox, 1987-97) One of its network’s founding shows offered one of the spiciest TV couples yet featured.

Roseanne and Dan Conner (“Roseanne,” ABC, 1988-97) The very definition of a blue-collar marriage, this couple saw each other through matters ranging from finances to health.

Paul and Jamie Buchman (“Mad About You,” NBC, 1992-99) So authentic-feeling was this New York couple’s marriage, the possibility they might break up toward the end of the show’s run was devastating for fans.

Ray and Debra Barone (“Everybody Loves Raymond,” CBS, 1996-2005) Another reality-grounded TV marriage, this union was a perfect blend of a worrier and a realist.

Claire and Phil Dunphy, and Gloria and Jay Pritchett (“Modern Family,” ABC, 2009-present) Both of these couples have been so much parts of the fiber of this show from the start, it’s hard to think of one without the other.

NBC has enough faith in “Marry Me” that it’s premiering after “The Voice” Tuesday, Oct. 14.

A cringe-worthy scene opens the sitcom, with Annie and Jake (Casey Wilson, “Saturday Night Live,” Ken Marino, “Reno 911”) returning from a wonderful vacation.

She is certain he was going to propose. He didn’t, and now she’s in a snit that escalates into a full-blown fit, during which she castigates relatives and friends.

She’s ranting, with her back to him, and Jake is kneeling, ring in hand. Those relatives and friends are hidden around her apartment for the surprise engagement.

“It’s not going to be about their wedding,” Wilson says. “It’s more of a ‘Mad About You’ update, I’m hoping it’s ‘Mad Men’ meets ‘30 Rock.’”

Truly, it’s more of a “Happy Endings” reunion. Marino and Wilson worked together on that comedy, which David Caspe wrote. He also wrote “Marry Me” and did in fact marry Wilson.

“When I was out pitching the show, I had not proposed yet, but I knew I was going to,” Caspe says during a press conference. “And in an attempt to sell the show, because I care much more about money than personal relationships, all my pitches were basically saying like what’s great about this show is that it’s going to mirror my actual life because I’m going to be proposing very soon.”

So networks heads knew before Wilson, just as on the show, Annie’s family and friends know before she does.

Speaking in Beverly Hills, Calif. five weeks after their wedding, Wilson says, “Annie is loosely based off myself. She is very emotional and can be fun and sarcastic and anything can set her off.”

Jake has a terrific calming effect on her, and Annie knows it. “Without you, I would spin off into space like Sandra Bullock in ‘Gravity,’ ” she tells him.

“Jake is the calm in her storm,” Marino says. “He’s got as many quirks and neuroses as she does.”

In addition to botching Jake’s romantic proposal (rose petals in the shape of a heart on the bed), Annie decides to apologize by proposing to him at work. Instead, she gets him fired.

The show has a strong supporting cast including Tim Meadows and Dan Bucatinsky as Annie’s fathers, both named Kevin. Their running joke is that no one knows which is the biological father, though Meadows is black and Bucatinsky is white.

JoBeth Williams plays Jake’s mom, and Jake and Annie have a cadre of friends.

“It’s a super funny show,” says Marino, who started in improv and continues to write. “It’s a comedy created by David Caspe so it’s not going to be just a sweet comedy. It’s not saccharin. It has subversive jokes.”

Does Todd Chrisley still know best? It depends on whom you ask.

Of course, the hugely opinionated Atlanta-area family patriarch maintains he has only the purest intentions, but the self-made millionaire's five children -- might, and often do -- question how he shows it. Their misadventures resume their television showcase as Season 2 of the unscripted USA Network series “Chrisley Knows Best” begins Tuesday, Oct. 14.

“The comments that people are making,” Todd says, “are, ‘I love your family. I love your closeness. I love the fact that you're present, that the kids have consequences, and that you're trying to teach them the right way.’

“Even though they don’t always do the right thing, I still love them, and I love them through that. And hopefully, as we’re walking that path together, you’re going to listen and that you’re trying to teach the kids how to be respectful and to do unto others as you’d have them do unto you.”

Chrisley's first rule: “Respect others and to do unto others as you’d have them do unto you.”

‘Top Chef’
heads to Boston for wicked good eats in Season 12

Thanksgiving dinner at Plimoth Plantation, ballpark eats at Fenway Park and bar comestibles at “Cheers.”

It’s little wonder, then, why host Padma Lakshmi calls Season 12 of “Top Chef” “the most American of seasons.”

The new season of the Bravo culinary competition series, which opens Wednesday, Oct. 15, touches down in Boston as chef-testants battle it out at various locales in and around the city under the watchful eyes of returning judges Tom Colicchio, Gail Simmons and Hugh Acheson and recurring judge Richard Blais.

A highlight of the season for Lakshmi was a challenge in which the chefs had to create an authentic Thanksgiving dinner using only ingredients and equipment that were available at the first celebration in 1621.

“We wanted to stay as true as possible to the experience of the pilgrims,” Lakshmi explains. “We wanted to replicate that for our chefs, so they wound up spending the night there. They had nuts, they had cranberries. They had certain things like salt ... . They did have squash, they had pumpkin seeds, they had lobster, they had rabbit, they had zucchini, they had corn. They had all of the things that would traditionally grow there at that time.

“We helped them out a little bit but really they had to build their own fires, they had to tend to them, they had to regulate the heat on those fires ... . They were stripped of any modern convenience or any exotic ingredients that weren’t typically indigenous to that part of the world or could have been brought from England. ... And we did have a lot of historians on hand to help us with that.”

The result, Lakshmi says, was food she couldn’t stop eating – not unlike a modern Thanksgiving.

“It was different, it was fresh, it was flavorful, it had a lot of savoriness,” she says. “And left to their bare-bones equipment and ingredients, I think the chefs really dug deep and found their inner voice, their inner identity as chefs.”

What are you currently reading?
“I am currently reading, again, ‘A Moveable Feast’ by Ernest Hemingway. It was on my bookshelf and I just felt like reading something by Hemingway and it was staring me in the face. So I thought this was a good short book for me to devour again. Lately, I’ve been thinking a lot about Paris so it seemed like a nice book to read.”

What did you have for dinner last night?
“Last night I had lamb shoulder and black-eyed peas and rice. And chili eggplant.”

What is your next project?
“My next project is to finish this book I’m writing (laughs) but I don’t want to talk about it until it’s written.”

When was the last vacation you took – where and why?
“I took a vacation in July to Mexico with my 4-year-old daughter and my parents as a present to my mother, who turned 70 this year.”

LP-LAKE PLACID SP-SPRING LAKE

News Sun

October 12 - 18, 2014 25
Big Driver
8 p.m., 10 p.m. on (TNT)
While taking an ill-advised shortcut on a remote New England road, thriller writer Tess Thorne (Maria Bello) is stranded when a tire blows out. Relief when a stranger (Will Harris) stops and offers assistance quickly turns to horror as the man savagely assaults her and leaves her for dead. Making her way home, Tess tries to pull herself together enough to find her assailant and get revenge. Olympia Dukakis and Joan Jett also star in this 2014 chiller adapted from a story in Stephen King’s collection “Full Dark, No Stars.” (HDTV)

Lone Survivor
8 p.m. on (HBO)
Written for the screen and directed by Peter Berg, this true and intense 2013 drama draws excellent work from Mark Wahlberg (as Marcus Luttrell, whose book inspired the film), Taylor Kitsch of TV’s Berg-produced “Friday Night Lights”, Ben Foster and Emile Hirsch as Navy SEALs engaged in direct battle with the Taliban. It’s the result of an operation that goes awry and leaves the U.S. military men reliant on help from locals. Eric Bana also appears. (HDTV)

Finders Keepers
9 p.m. on (SYFY)
Are creepy dolls making a comeback? A demon doll stalked Karen Black in “Terror of Tower” (1975) and the “Chucky” films scared up a lot of green. Now we have “Anna-belle,” a sequel to “The Conjuring,” in theaters and, on TV, this 2014 thriller about a child who becomes obsessed with a sinister doll left behind in her new home by previous owners. Jaime Pressly (“Jennifer Falls”), Manu Bennett (“Star Trek: The Next Generation”), Patrick Muldoon (“Starship Troopers”) and Tobin Bell (“Saw”) star. (HDTV)

"X-MEN: DAYS OF FUTURE PAST"

With original director Bryan Singer returning, a clever plot conceit lets cast members from the movie franchise’s various editions merge here ... so both Patrick Stewart and James McAvoy can be Professor Xavier, and Ian McKellen and Michael Fassbender both can play Magneto. The story’s reallynispin is Hugh Jackman as Wolverine, who’s sent back in time to alter events that would set up big danger for mutants and humans alike. Peter Dinklage (“Game of Thrones”) plays a scientist at the heart of the problems, with Hallie Berry, Jennifer Lawrence, Anna Paquin, Ellen Page and Nicholas Hoult among the other returnees.  (PG-13: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray; starts Oct. 28 on On Demand)

"MR. PEABODY & SHERMAN"

Youngsters may need an explanation of who the characters are, but their elders likely remember the title duo from their television run as members of the animated stable that also yielded Rocky and Bullwinkle. Mr. Peabody (voice of “Modern Family” Emmy winner Ty Burrell) is a canine, but he’s managed to adopt young human Sherman (voice of Max Charles), and they embark on a literal trip through history via a time machine. Stephen Colbert and Allison Janney, both of whom also fared well at the recent Emmy Awards, also are heard along with Leslie Mann (“The Other Woman”).  (PG: AS) (Also on Blu-ray; starts Oct. 28 on On Demand)

"FARGO: SEASON 1"

The Coen brothers’ movie had big wins at the Oscars, and in turn, this FX series spinoff made its mark at this year’s Emmys. Even if the two versions’ characters aren’t exact matches, they’re close enough in spirit, with Billy Bob Thornton as a questionable influence on a small-town-Minnesota insurance man (Martin Freeman), Talon, who made a very big impact on critics, and Colin Hanks play members of the local police force.   (Not rated: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

"THE HONORABLE WOMAN:"

Even timelier than its makers might have anticipated, this drama devised for Sundance TV and England’s BBC gives infrequent television visitor Maggie Gyllenhaal a showcase role. She plays a businesswoman trying to promote peace between Palestine and Israel, and while she is celebrated in some corners for her efforts, others are conspiring against her. Various international intelligence organizations become involved in the situation. The strong cast also includes Stephen Rea and Janet McTeer.   (Not rated: AS, P, V)

"2 BROKE GIRLS: THE COMPLETE THIRD SEASON"

Max and Caroline (Kat Dennings, Beth Behrs) both have affairs of the heart in this round of the CBS sitcom. Max’s romance is with Deke (Eric Andre) — a seemingly poor and honest fellow — while Caroline gets involved with a cooking-school teacher (Gilles Marini) whose big secret eventually comes out. After hours, the waitresses try to keep their new designer-cupcake business afloat. May Lynn Rajskub (“24”) also has a recurring role during the season.   (Not rated: AS, P)

Second ‘Dolphin Tale’ does manage to hold water

Anytime you see a movie title with a “2” at the end of it, if you saw the film named by the first part of the title, you pretty much know what to expect.

That’s not necessarily a bad thing, since the job of a sequel is to keep fans of the first edition satisfied. “Dolphin Tale 2” does that in a capable way; however, entertainment for all ages as it continues the tale of the aquarium-based dolphin named Winter.

She’s in need of new companionship of her own kind, so the marine doctor played again by Harry Connick Jr. spearheads the search. Meanwhile, Winter’s human friend Sawyer (Nathan Gamble) weighs spending a semester at sea, something that turns out not to be a snap decision – even for a youth so enamored of ocean life.

The dilemmas are big enough to keep fans of the first “Dolphin Tale” engaged, especially since the aspects involving Winter are based on fact, so the marine doctor played again by Harry Connick Jr. does that in a capable way.

As Ashley Judd, Kris Kristofferson and (in what amounts to a walk-on) Morgan Freeman.

It’s nice to see such talents supporting a family film, and the same goes for returning director Charles Martin Smith, probably best-known as an actor for playing Toad in “American Graffiti.” He also wrote the script here, and if the result veers toward the sticky-sweet on occasion, at least it’s clear that everyone’s heart is in the right place.

That also goes for the picture’s cinematographers and special-effects team, doing a nice job of making the waterbound scenes look visually lyrical. In some instances, the real Winter gets a boost from computer graphics that look real enough not to be distracting, which is quite a trick in itself.

It won’t change the world, but “Dolphin Tale 2” is a nice diversion that’s something of a rare breed these days: a live-action movie designed to give younger and older viewers a pleasant time together at the cinema. And there’s certainly nothing wrong with that.
