The issue in the race between Browne and Gilchrist is one of character and ideas. The people of this state have a right to know what each candidate stands for. It is possible for a few narrow-minded people who are fighting for their party to present the candidates in the light of some local issue, but the great majority of voters will not be swayed by the issue of a few local issues.

The question before the people of Missouri is whether or not the candidates are fit to be elected to the state office. It is for all the people of Missouri to decide this question. It is not a question for the local offices to decide it. It is a question for the state officers to decide it.

The people of Missouri are not content with a candidate who has a record of political activity. They want a candidate who has a record of public service. They want a candidate who has a record of public usefulness. They want a candidate who has a record of public integrity.
