The wide white columns, the high square tower, and the ivy-grown walls of the White House are to be seen from the perimeter of Washington's famous avenue. The White House is the residence of the President of the United States, and the offices in which the President and the Secretary of State hold the most important business of the Executive Department. The President's office is on the second floor, and it is the only one in the building which is closed to the public. The President has a private library and a private dining room, and each of these rooms has its own private entrance.

The White House is surrounded by a large garden, which is divided into three sections. The first section contains the President's private garden, which is open to the public during the spring and summer months. The second section contains the President's official garden, which is used for state occasions. The third section contains the President's personal residence, which is open to the public during the summer months.

The White House is the most historic and most famous building in the United States, and it has been the home of every President of the United States since George Washington. It is a symbol of American democracy and a symbol of the power of the President of the United States.

In order to make the White House a restoration of the home of the President, it was necessary to place a few small alterations in the building in order to make it more suitable for the purposes for which it is now used. The alterations were made in the following manner:

1. The north wing of the White House was extended, and the old rooms were remodeled and improved.
2. The south wing of the White House was extended, and the old rooms were remodeled and improved.
3. The central portion of the White House was remodeled and improved.
4. The old state rooms were remodeled and improved.
5. The old dining room was remodeled and improved.
6. The old kitchen was remodeled and improved.
7. The old servants' quarters were remodeled and improved.
8. The old stables were remodeled and improved.

The alterations were made in such a manner that the historic character of the White House was preserved, and it is now a beautiful and fitting home for the President of the United States.
