TEDDY.

I want to tell you about a cat, named Teddy, which belonged to my aunt and uncle. He was very intelligent, and seemed to understand all that was said to him. He disliked strangers, and would disappear for some time if any visited at his master's house.

Teddy was obliged to do a trick before eating. When a plate of meat was held above his head he would sit up on his hind feet like a dog, and scratch his ear with his paw.

When my uncle came up the walk toward the house Teddy would run to meet him, and roll over and over at his feet.

He dearly loved raw corn, and would come running into the garden if he heard anyone husking corn or tearing the ears from the stalk.

When Teddy died he was mourned as for an only child by his master and mistress.—Marion Parker, in the New York Tribune.

A COMPOSITION ON HENS.

A little Kansas boy wrote this composition on hens: "Hens is curious animals. They don't have no nose, nor no teeth, nor no ears. The outside of hens is generally put into pillars and feather dusters. The inside of a hen is sometimes filled up with marbles and shirt buttons and sich. A hen is very much smaller than a good many other animals but they will dig up more tomato plants than any thing that ain't a hen. Hens is very useful to lay eggs for plum pudding. I like plum pudding. Skinny Bates eat so much plum pudding once that it set him into the collery. Hens has got two wings and can fly when they are scart. I cut my Uncle William's hen's neck off with a hatchet and it scart her to death. Hens sometimes make very fine spring chickens."—Successful Farming.

LIKE TO SEE THE STORK.

Little Freddie was told by the nurse one morning that the stork had visited the house during the night and left him a little baby sister, and asked if he would like to see her.

"I don't care nothing about the baby," said Freddie, "but I'd like to see the stork."—Bee Hive.

Pretty But Useless.

When old Perkins left the house in which he had lived for forty years, and arrived with all his household goods and treasures at the home of his son, there was trouble.

One of his most treasured family heirlooms was missing—a big family album bound in full calf. Perkins was inconsolable. "I've used it regular for years," he said, "and I wouldn't 'ave lost it for worlds."

"Never mind," said his son, "we'll see what can be done about it."

And from that day he commenced saving up his money until he had sufficient to buy a new album, beautifully bound in crimson plush, with great brass clasps, which he presented to his father, naturally expecting an outburst of thanks. But no.

On seeing it the old man's jaw fell to an alarming degree. Then he banged his withered fist on the table with a force that simply staggered young Perkins. "In the name of goodness, man," he roared, "who could strop a razor on that?"—Tit-Bits.

Couldn't Catch Him.

A young country chap once got a job in a city grocery. He was very cautious in his new berth—they had told him at home that the city people would try to josh him because he was green. He kept a sharp lookout accordingly for joshers.

A sober old maid entered the grocery one morning.

"I want some bird seed, please," she said.

The new clerk sneered and answered scornfully:

"No; ye don't lady. Ye can't josh me. Birds grow from eggs, not seeds."

Grand Opportunity
