Next came Riceville to Gainesville and was likewise defeated. It was a great game. The F team played as well as they did the Florida game and covered the ball on four great runs. The Florida team covered their opponents to within 45 yards of the goal post. Only once did our players have to put up a fight to get the ball. The ball was on our 2 yard line and down to force it down. They failed to advance the ball only once. Consequently the F team covered the ball on four great runs. Florida defeated the F team on their own goal line.

This game ended our football season of 1906. We played six games, won all of them and lost none. The F team lost three games in Gainesville and the losing team made three good efforts. We are sure that they will make four more. Our F team made four good efforts. We are sure that they will make four more. We have some fine players. I hope that we will have the opportunity to play football next year, and, taking advantage of the Florida team's weakness, we may be able to make a very fine record.

To Mr. Forsythe, or any boys known to me, "F" and "G," I speak the words with truth and feeling. The story of the game is well known. Savannah and Florida were two of the best teams in the south. The Savannah team was composed of older men. The Florida team was composed of young men. The Savannah team was carried off by the Florida team.

Before the victory of the F team over Savannah in 1906, we did not have a great many of them. We had carried them around with our glory, and, the story of the game was well known. Savannah, the home of the South, was defeated by the Florida team. The Florida team was composed of men and the Savannah team was composed of boys.

On January 19, 1907, the Georgia Department of Military Affairs announced the appointment of a commission to investigate the conditions of the state's public schools. The commission was chaired by John H. Fisk, a veteran of the Civil War, and included representatives from each of the state's congressional districts. The commission was charged with examining the state's educational system and making recommendations for improvement.

On the same day, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of agriculture and home economics. The college was founded with the goal of providing practical education in agriculture, home economics, and related fields to prepare students for careers in these areas.

On May 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of education. The college was founded with the goal of preparing future teachers for the state's public schools and disseminating the latest educational theories and practices.

On June 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of law. The college was founded with the goal of providing legal education to prepare students for careers in law, as well as promoting the rule of law and the welfare of society through legal education and research.

On July 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of business administration. The college was founded with the goal of providing education in business administration to prepare students for careers in business, as well as promoting economic development and the welfare of society through the application of business knowledge and principles.

On August 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of engineering. The college was founded with the goal of providing education in engineering to prepare students for careers in engineering, as well as promoting technological advancement and the welfare of society through the application of engineering knowledge and principles.

On September 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of pharmacy. The college was founded with the goal of providing education in pharmacy to prepare students for careers in pharmacy, as well as promoting the public health and the welfare of society through the application of pharmaceutical knowledge and principles.

On October 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of medicine. The college was founded with the goal of providing education in medicine to prepare students for careers in medicine, as well as promoting the public health and the welfare of society through the application of medical knowledge and principles.

On November 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of arts and sciences. The college was founded with the goal of providing education in the arts and sciences to prepare students for careers in various fields, as well as promoting the development of knowledge and the welfare of society through the application of arts and sciences knowledge and principles.

On December 1, 1907, the University of Georgia's Board of Regents approved the establishment of a new college of education. The college was founded with the goal of preparing future teachers for the state's public schools and disseminating the latest educational theories and practices.