A city-based consultant said Tuesday that marina worker and property owners should expect more taxes in 2011.

The consultant, Todd Rice, said town officials need to find a way to pay for the infrastructure projects that have been identified.

Rice, who heads the City of Marathon
Commission of Engineering, said the town council should consider raising the property tax rate for the first time in two decades.

Bozarth "gave a full confession they shared. They were arrested for bludgeoning her husband, jailed since March when a murder charge.

Bozarth, 39, has been receiving $650,000 that her husband had inherited from his mother, according to Detective Jason Madnick’s arrest affidavit. However, his mother, according to a former friend of Denise Bozarth, told detectives that Denise often spoke of various ways she might kill Edward, including making the vessel explode, while he was at anchor. Another method that Denise Bozarth reportedly outlined to Colon was bludgeoning her husband while he slept, then "wrapping his body in plastic to hide the smell" after the body was hidden in the boat’s bilge.

Another method that Denisse outlined to Colon was "making the vessel sink" while he slept, then "wrap his body in a towel. The body was left on the boat, the body was left on the boat. When Edward’s body was discovered aboard his boat at Gilbert’s Marina in early July 2007, Bozarth died, and the body was left.

The Marathon City Council gave tentative approval Tuesday to help Fair Insurance Rate Bureau (FIRB) with an information management system. Construction information on more than 41,000 FIRB customers will be transferred to City servers.

FIRB Executive Director Amanda Mann inferred the need for help in an effort to prove Citizens Property Insurance Corp. that Keys homes are built sturdier than homes in the rest of the state and, therefore, Keys windstorm policy rates should be lower.

According to Mann, between 2003 and 2011, Citizens saved a rice profit of $594 million from Keys residents because they have a lower loss rate. "So now they don’t have a lot of losses to deal with," Mann said.

"That way, they could assess the presentations of the one that said Keys homes are built sturdier, and then review, as Manny said, any of the data keys, and conclude that it is not sufficient to prove that Keys homes are built sturdier," Mann said.

"The council makes a similar pledge as the City commission did, agreeing to give the city have city staff a significant amount of time to work as much as possible to resolve this issue," Mann said.

"They way they could assess the cost would be really interesting," Mann said. "It is a significant amount of time, but it’s something we have never been able to do with this project."\n
Grove, Rick Scott has maintained that citizens have used at least 10 years of the city’s consultant office and the breakdown is 1.5 million dollars and five staff positions. "We agree that they need to make this a non-fac- tional and pay out the time in a non-sy " says Mann. That she added that part of that plan is having an immediate impact on the city’s budget.

"We have 31 million up on the cost for citizens to provide windstorm insurance to as many customers as possible," Mann said.

"We’re doing this for safety dependencies. We need to involve the city and the people that help in the city, in the process," Mann said.

Time running out on budget

Last week, just in time for the conventions of the nation’s two major political parties, the nation’s Congressional Budget Office sent a message that significantly raises the stakes on the fiscal crisis looming at the end of the year.

If Congress fails to act, it will lose the ability to lower taxes that have gone up almost 8 percent for the rest of the year because it’s too late to do anything about the federal budget for the year that ends Sept. 30. That would be a billion.

That’s nothing to cheer about. But what’s coming at the end of the year — the so-called fiscal cliff — in even worse.

Under law, if Congress and the president can’t come up with a fix, unemployement would rise almost from its current 8.3 percent to 9 percent. Total economic output would drop by an alarming rate — 2.9 percent in the first half of the year.

The fiscal cliff is the result of the stop-gap budget deal Congress and President Obama reached last year in order to avoid another crisis and allow the government to pay its bills.

It mandates across-the-board tightening-in-the-form of government spending, including expenditures in Medicare and other entitlements that richly benefit right away by many Americans. At the same time, new tax income would be “lost” as many Americans move forward when the economy went south.

Don’t reward passive-aggressive types

Be rational, maintain notes and control

Do you work with some- one who is passive-aggressive? It may be an easy target to be a kind of bully. They may show you the surface but what can you do about it? They rarely show their true feelings. This one has always been uncertain about their work. How do you recognize that one? Other social media?

BofA ends "zombie accounts"

Reuniting closed accounts met with anger

By Richard Burnett

Orlando Sentinel

The Charlotte, N.C.-based bank, second- largest in South and Central Florida, said this week it will no longer team up to consolidate accounts that somehow — through error or an oversight by customers — continue to receive automated electronic transactions.

Consumer advocates have criticized the prac- tice, saying it often exposes passive-aggressive clients to new account fees. The bank also alerts customers to the potential for fees.

‘Zombie accounts’ keep ninja accounts

Unfortunately, there is a big disconnect as to how they appear and how they behave.

A passive-aggressive per- son often hides other for his or her shortcomings, or takes the blame of one else has performed at seemingly unimportant matters.

This person may have a homepage, impotence or recent- ly return from a week’s sick. They may be all talk, all representation, and pretend to not see, hear, or understand results.

A passive-aggressive per- son will often give you the impression of being a mechanism society that is in a h i d e r. They love doing it in a way that looks like they care.

Here’s what to do if you are their life.

• Learn to recognize the passive-aggressive behavior. Contrast the behavior. Passive-aggressive people avoid directly expressing their feelings or acknowledge ed them in a quick, un- believable way. Tell them or li- berate it. The other person will deny you. Say. ‘All know how it appears to me?’ Do not argue, because you won’t win.

• Be friendly but avoid getting too personal. A pa- ssive-aggressive co-worker will talk about you behind your back.

Take note: If this is a work situation, write down all important information. If anything wrong, a passive-aggressive co-worker will show you the book. See you have something in that to support your position.

Keep calm. Passive-aggressive co-workers can muddle by finding the various inequities that give them an edge in power. Don’t lose your temper or respond to personal attacks — because that’s also a favored behavior. Keep your head in the face of passive-aggressive behav- ior and you’ll feel more in control of the situation and the way.

Dramatic honesty. If your co-worker is lying, tell him or her or not in a calm, collected fashion. Don’t get sidetracked into alleys that will turn into a verbal fight of both sides. This is when lesser notes comes in handy.

Take note of your supervi- sor. Remember, passive-aggressive people love to pass the buck and will try to dump their errors in your lap. Let your supervi- sor know about your co-worker’s behavior and per- formance.

Don’t get emotional about it. If you get emotional about it, then you lose control. Even with the type that you can see, you cannot undo them.

Finally, they figured out the money. In a survey earlier this year, Consumer Union found that BoF and Chase Bank were the only large banks to join their consumer protection policy. The consumer advocacy organization hopes Chase will follow BoF, lending its abandoning of it. Martindale said that she noted that con- sumers still face obstacles that make switch- ing banks a “time-con- suming” process.

Consumers Union has called on the new Fed- eral Consumer Financial Protection Bureau to adopt reforms that would eliminate such obstacles.

Look closely at each check- ing account agreements and you will find the terms. Consumers Union says that they want to take certain actions whenever they choose to close an account.

Rod Jones, an Orlando bank- ing lawyer. Large banks just don’t want to deal with the costs of “administrative hassle of chasing down former customers” if there’s an issue with an old account.

For a smaller bank, that may not be a big concern, since they usually don’t have as much customer familiarity with their bank, which can easily teach them to go for their personal account.

GREEN LIVING

Even furniture can help with Earth Day

Dear Earth Talk: Are there certain brands or retail stores that offer sustainable furniture options by banning specific chemicals from their products? If so, where can I look for information on their practices?

W. Cary, Torrance, N.J.

While we’re not aware of any specific furniture companies that fully ban certain chemicals from their products, there are a few things you can do to make informed decisions when shopping for furniture.

First, consider choosing furniture made from sustainable materials, such as bamboo, reclaimed wood, or recycled metal. These materials are often less harmful to the environment than traditional wood or metal.

Second, look for furniture that is certified by independent organizations like the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) or Sustainable Forestry Initiative (SFI). These certifications ensure that the wood used in the furniture was harvested in an environmentally responsible manner.

Third, consider second-hand furniture. Upcycling can be a great way to reduce waste and give old pieces new life.

Lastly, if you’re looking for green furniture options, there are several online resources that can help you find what you need. A search for “green furniture” will turn up numerous options, and you can also check out the “green furniture guide” at EarthWorks, which has compiled a list of certified and sustainable furniture options.

In summary, while it may not be as easy as simply checking for a certain certification on a label, there are several steps you can take to ensure that the furniture you buy is environmentally friendly. Most importantly, always keep in mind that the best way to reduce your impact is to buy less furniture in the first place.

Beverly McClellan performs at Pearl's Womankind fundraiser

Plays Pearl's in Sept. 6 benefit concert

By Claudia Miller
L'Attitudes Contributor

Beverly McClellan’s performance at Pearl’s Womankind fundraiser is one to remember. McClellan, who won NBC’s “The Voice” in 2011, is a vocal powerhouse known for her powerful voice and incredible musicianship. She is a true artist who brings passion and emotion to every song she performs.

McClellan’s performance was a highlight of the evening, with her rendition of “Piece of My Mind” and “John the Revelator,” which is one of her signature songs. She also performed a beautiful version of “Hollow,” a song that was inspired by the beautiful sunset.

McClellan’s performance was not only a musical treat, but it also created additional buzz and excitement for her upcoming tour. She is thrilled to see the beautiful sunset at Pearl’s Womankind and is looking forward to performing at the venue again.

McClellan’s performance is a testament to the power of music and the impact it can have on people. Her talent and dedication to her craft are truly inspiring, and we look forward to hearing more from this incredible artist.

Wonderful artistry defines this animated film

New animated comedy uses stop-motion and very effective 3D techniques to bring to life a tale of witches, zombies, ghosts and out-of-control adults.

FILM

“ParaNorman,” an animated comedy with supernatural and inventive 3D techniques and more during the weekend of June 22, will be coming to the Keys.

Produced by the animation company Laika, which is owned by Nike co-founder Phil Knight, the film also has Travis Knight (son of Phil Knight) as lead animator.

“ParaNorman” took two years to make and the craftsmanship is evident in every scene. Whether it’s the movement of the zombies, the design of the characters or the animation, everything is done with precision and care.

The film is a tale of a small town of Blithe Hollow, a down town village where a witch is banished and burned somewhere near the town 300 years ago. Unknown to the townsfolk, the witch cursed the town and every year on the anniversary of her death, someone must fulfill a prescribed ritual to appease it until the next anniversary. But this year, circumstances prevent that ritual from taking place and the town is beset by ghosts and zombies released by the curse. All hell is breaking loose and little Norman is the only one who can save Blithe Hollow.

Norman is the worst kid who gets picked on and bullied, both at school and at home. Because he claims to be able to see and talk to the dead, including people, animals and even road kill, his fame grows.

The film is also anticipated that this year marks 30 years since “ParaNorman” was released in 1982 and the film is a celebration of the late animator and director at Laika, Dave LaFerriere, who passed away in 2010.

The film is a fun and creative animated feature that is sure to appeal to all ages.

Facebook will come down for the show.

Ticket sales are limited to 290 people for fundraiser at the historic Key West hotel. McCallan said she’d like the idea of people hanging out in the more intimate venue. She enjoys inviting the crowd to come up on stage with her during performances.

“She likes to be as big as possible, so it’s a given,” she said. “I like people being right next to me on stage when I’m doing my one-liners.”

“I think people like being right next to the comic, singing and playing right next to them. I feed off the energy of the crowd.”

As the main event, McCallan will be performing many of the songs from her debut international release and fifth album, “Four Nighthawks,” which included works in summer gallery show, “Whitecaps,” garnered the Jim Racchi Earth Rood Memorial Award and the Duke awards from Sculpture the Studios of Key West.

Sculptor wins among 80 entries at The Studios of Key West. Lauren P. McCullin won this year’s Sculpting Summer Show, shown at the Studios of Key West, on staff with the studio, has won multiple awards from Southern Key West, the Bob Crane Excellence Award, Dante Ross Memorial Award and the Jan Racci Earth and Sea Award. The entry, “Whitecaps,” garnered the most votes during the summer gallery show, staged at The Studios, which included works in watercolor, photography, acrylics, oil, acrylic, bronze, stone, wood, sculpture, mixed media, clay printing, weaving, porcelain, jewelry, quilting and mixed media. The sculpture, “Coral Reef,” in porcelain and stainless steel, won second place.

Another well-known Key West artist, Lizzy Sonner, also won second place with a work titled “Woven.” She’s studied glass blowing at The Maryland Institute of Art at The John C Campbell Folk School in North Carolina, where she studied with California glassmaker Joyce Rosska. Sonner says she follows an old technique called “lampworking,” (originally oil lamps were used to heat the glass), to produce hand-crafted glass beads by melting hot molten glass around a stainless steel rod. More recently, she’s expanded into mixed-media work.
