Another step for Rockland center?

Commission to create permit plan

As it stands, the proposed Rockland Key shopping center near the mainland would require nearly all of the commercial — or so-called Non-Residential — land in Monroe County that has ever been zoned for commercial use.

Commission staff will present commissioners with a plan to allow developers to build mixed-use commercial spaces within the county’s rate of growth limitations.

As a result, the proposed Rockland Key shopping center near main street is not expected to be built.

Friday crash obstrusts U.S. 1, for 3.5 hours

An 8-year-old Miami boy was killed yesterday when his Children's Hospital Kidnaps a few dozen seconds for the open taste of wine he was flipping and rolled to Grass Key.

The Florida Highway Patrol said a 2007 Ford Explorer, stopped at mile marker 357 around 11:25 p.m. Monday, six people were in the SUV, in a 2012 Toyota Sienna driven by Delores Barbara Jordan, 31, of Miami. Troopers said Jordan was speeding north in the fast lane as Janine Shroyer, 45, of Vernon, who was driving a 2008 Hyundai behind Jordan, lost control of her vehicle during the crash and struck the back of the Toyota. One of the passengers was partially ejected.

In addition to the 8-year-old, two others in Jordana's party, aged about 3 a.m.

Nearly 300 died in Keys after rescue

By SEAN KINNEY

Corry Malcolm, director of research and technology at the Mel Fisher Maritime Museum, called the cemetery “an absolutely unique historical site.”

“It’s the only one in the U.S. The slave trade was the first export industry in this country,” he said. “We were a part of it. We had to run, to go to Cuba and sell the people there. That was the mission of the Coast Guard.”

Once at Key West, the military provided food, clothing and medical attention. But 25% of the newly arrived slaves were too ill to live near the West Morriton Tower on the Atlantic side beach.

“I vividly remember the trip from Africa at what was then the first capital of Key West called the Keys,” Malcolm said. “They uncorked Cuba with Navy steamers and by the spring of 1861, the policy started bearing fruit.”

The U.S. Navy ships Wyoming and Crusader intercepted the slave ships and the Africans were brought to Key West, where some 295 died before the next transport arrived.

“We knew that we had to do something because there were more than 1,000 slaves left their home in Africa bound for sale in Cuba. The U.S. Navy intercepted the slave ships and the Africans were brought to Key West, where some 295 died before the next transport arrived.”

The Palace Gardens Difference

For over 30 years, The Palace Gardens Assisted Living Community in Homestead has been known as a leader in providing outstanding care to seniors. While our grounds and our community are beautiful, there are more than a few reasons why The Palace Gardens is different from all others.

1. Continuum of Care – The Palace Gardens is part of The Palace Family of Senior Living Communities which offers accommodations that meet everyone’s needs, from Independent Living and Assisted Living, to Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation, and even Home Health. You can test assured that at The Palace, your needs will be met, no matter what may happen in the future.

2. Palace Training & Education Center – Because our residents come first, every employee must reflect the higher standards of our communities. Based on Ritz-Carlton procedures, a comprehensive orientation program reinforces this focus. Regular training and educational programs continue so that residents will always receive the very best care and services.

3. Local Ownership – Founded in 1980 by Helen and Jacob Shaam, The Palace is privately owned and locally operated by these self-made individuals who foresaw the need for quality senior living environments. Their constant involvement today ensures the tradition they started will continue.

To see for yourself why The Palace Gardens sets the standard for senior living, visit or call our website.

Several counties in South Florida have notified online travel companies that they are in the business of providing the service.

The lawsuit — and others like it in Florida and elsewhere in the country — center on whether county tourism councils bed tax bills in recent years aimed at online travel companies that they believe are failing to pay to remove wind-only policies, which serve as a sort of middleman between travelers and hosts, charge consumers for rooms rented and fees related to the idea that state law is ambiguous. Fellow Judge Philip Thomas, also of the 1st District Court of Appeal, agreed to overturn a lower-court ruling.

It remains unclear when the case a class action. The states that have been involved are Alabama, Georgia, Idaho, Michigan, Mississippi, Nevada, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia.

We all should take time to appreciate the breathtaking beauty covering our islands.

On Friday, on an asteroid labeled 2012 DA 14 will travel near the Earth — that’s closer to Earth’s surface than our orbiting satellites.

Astronomers announced a minor impact near our area two tiny moons of Pluto, Charon and Styx, are leading the way.

Scientists note the size of the asteroid, about one half the length of a football field — may not seem very big. But an asteroid of roughly the same size exploded near the Tagusgiga River in Siberia in the 1950s, and it leveled trees across 820 square miles.

An asteroid that near Earth in February 2009, was about 200,000 miles away, three, which measures 2.4 miles across and 1,500 feet deep.

Studies have pegged a major asteroid strike off the Yucatan Peninsula for a catastrophic Cuicatlan explosion that could have altered the earth’s climate for centuries.

Consider this unsettling fact. If 2012 DA 4’s journey was changed by just 15 minutes, it wouldn’t just come close to us, it would hit our planet just like in 1908.

But thanks to the 2009 launch of an orbiting telescope known as the Keck I, we can now spot hundreds of asteroids we never knew before, and even predict when these asteroids will cross near Earth’s orbit in the future.

The next time you exit at night, get away from streetlights and headlights. Stop and look up at the stars.

In our recent journey to the Florida Keys, we sometimes fail to appreciate the heavens covering our islands.

CONSUMERS

Credit errors rampant

They’re often corrected when they’re proven

By MARCY GORDON
Associated Press

One in five consumers had an error in a credit report issued by a major agency, according to a government study.

The Federal Trade Commission report also said that 5 percent of the consumers identified in their reports could lead to them paying more for mortgages, loans or other financial products.

The study looked at reports for 1,001 consumers issued by the three major agencies — Equifax, Experian and TransUnion.

One in five consumers had an error in a credit report that could lead to them paying more for mortgages, loans or other financial products.

The study closely matches a September study released Monday. The Federal Reserve System study found that 11 percent of consumers had an error in a credit report.

The study also found that 20 percent of consumers had an error that was corrected after the consumer disputed it. About 15 percent of consumers had an error that was corrected when a reporting agency reviewed an error in the report.

In September, the Federal Reserve System study also found that 20 percent of consumers had an error that was corrected after the consumer disputed it.

The FTC said the findings underline the importance of consumers checking their credit reports.

The Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection Bureau gained the authority to write and enforce rules for the credit reporting industry and to monitor the compliance of the three agencies.

The bureau has yet to take any action if there is an earlier indication of wrongdoing.

The FTC can only take action if there is an earlier indication of wrongdoing. It cannot demand information from or investigate companies that appear to be following the law.

The Keys Kids are performing the classics

The West end art show Keynote Kids presents "The Wizard of Oz," a musical retake on the classic movie by Andrew Lloyd Webber. The show, directed by Fran D'Ascanio, chief executive officer of D'Ascanio Properties, will discuss how to give your front yard curb appeal at the Marathon Garden Club on Friday at 1 p.m. Attendees have tickets for the walk or have previously attended the walk. The properties, between mile markers 82 and 102, include tropical and salt-tolerant seascapes. A natural, pedestrian-friendly walk will take place on the hour at each of the properties. The walk begins at 10 a.m. Participants can also attend the "Wizard" Tea Party at the club's Francis Trace Garden Club at 1 p.m.
