SITTING ON THE FENCE

BY NATHANIEL GUBBIN

This is the season of Christmas. For this, among all the other holiday observances, I have no complaint to make. I have even been hopeful that the spirit of the season might be made truly significant to the flesh and blood of the average human being. But the commercialization of the human nature has so far been so complete that the spirit of the season is still but a catch word in the mouths of the average human being.

And if one is to be called a Christmas Indian, I, with Adam, keep Christmas. But I do not believe that the people of the world are satisfied with a Christmas of commercialization. I am inclined to believe that they are satisfied with a Christmas of the human nature. And if Christmas is to be a true celebration of the human nature, it must be a celebration of the human nature in all countries of the world. And if the people of the world are to have a true celebration of Christmas, it must be a celebration of the human nature in all countries of the world.

The only way to succeed in this is to recognize the human nature in all countries of the world. And the only way to succeed in this is to recognize the human nature in all countries of the world.
