Picture With A Legend

By JOHN PRIDEAUX

In St. George’s Church over the altarpiece a gilded and painted wood relief by Mr. Krinn, one of the first Important works of art to be produced in Barbados, is to be seen. The work is one of the finest examples of European painting and woodwork to be found in the island.

The painting was executed in the early 18th century by a German artist, Johann Christian Krinn, who came to Barbados in 1705. It depicts the story of St. George and the Dragon, a popular Biblical tale. The work was commissioned by Sir Henry Cary, a wealthy merchant and politician, who was one of the first English settlers in Barbados.

The relief is a masterpiece of technique, with fine details and a rich color palette. It is a fine example of the artistic talent of the period and a testament to the skill of the artist. It is a fine example of the artistic talent of the period and a testament to the skill of the artist.

THE SILENT ARMY

By Bernard Hall

London, April 15

A recent exhibition in London has brought to the attention of the public a remarkable work of art. "The Silent Army" is a painting by the renowned artist, Sir John Constable, which depicts a group of soldiers standing in the snow.

The painting, completed in 1821, is one of Constable’s finest works and is considered a masterpiece of the Romantic era. The artist’s use of light and shadow creates a sense of stillness and quiet, symbolizing the solemnity of the soldiers’ duty.

The Royal Insurance Company of Canada has recently announced a new policy for workers’ compensation insurance. The policy offers protection against work-related injuries and illnesses, and includes coverage for medical expenses and lost wages.

The policy is designed to provide peace of mind for workers and their families, and is expected to be particularly popular among small businesses. The company has also introduced a new online tool to help employers understand their coverage and file claims.

Incidents

On May 12, 1958, a group of children were playing near a railway track in London when they noticed a strange object hovering overhead. The children ran to tell their parents, who immediately called the police.

The object was later identified as a flying saucer, and a team of scientists was sent to investigate. The saucer was found to be a spacecraft from an advanced alien civilization, and was peacefully captured.

Blood Transfusion is Simple Now

What happens when a blood transfusion goes wrong? A rare case has been reported in the medical literature.

A patient undergoing surgery required a blood transfusion, but the donated blood was found to be incompatible. The patient experienced a severe reaction, and the transfusion had to be stopped.

This case highlights the importance of careful testing before administering a blood transfusion, and underscores the need for proper education and training for medical professionals.

No One Talks About It

There is a strange phenomenon occurring in some parts of the country, and so far no one seems to be discussing it. It is a case of spontaneous human combustion.

The condition occurs when the body catches fire without external ignition, and is typically accompanied by a loud crackling sound. Physicians are at a loss to explain the cause, and the phenomenon remains a mystery.
