Russia’s War Potential Greater Than Europe’s
“Don’t Be Fooled” Says Bevin

Margate, Kent, Oct. 5.

THE TREMENDOUS military power of Russia was dramatically brought to the attention of the world yesterday, when the United States Department of the Interior announced that for the first time since World War II, the United States would be purchasing Russian oil from the U.S.S.R.

The announcement came as a surprise to many people, who had believed that the United States would continue to be self-sufficient in oil and would not need to purchase foreign oil at all. But the Russian offer was too good to refuse, and the United States government quickly accepted the offer.

The oil would be used to power the United States' growing number of nuclear submarines, which are now considered to be the most powerful weapons in the world. The submarines are capable of carrying nuclear weapons and are a major threat to other countries.

The United States government has been under pressure to increase its oil production, but the Russian offer has given it a much-needed boost. The country is now expected to produce enough oil to meet its own needs and to export some to other countries.

In other news, the United States has announced that it will increase its military spending by 50%. This is in response to the growing threat posed by the United States' enemies, particularly Russia.

The move is likely to be met with mixed reactions, as some people believe that the United States is over-reacting, while others believe that it is necessary to protect the country from the growing threat.

The United States government has also announced that it will increase its military personnel by 10%. This is to ensure that there are enough troops to protect the country from any potential threats.

In conclusion, it is clear that the United States is taking the threat posed by Russia very seriously, and is taking strong measures to protect itself. The country is now expected to become even more powerful than it already is, as it increases its military spending and personnel.

N. KOREANS TURN AND FIGHT

BRITISH TROOPS FLOWN
UP TO 38TH PARALLEL

BY JULIAN BATE

North Korean forces stood and fought today for the first time since South Korean forces crossed the 38th parallel. They gave battle at a strategic point 50 miles north of the line. The central sector where General MacArthur was advancing his forces, North Koreans were reported manning their old positions above the parallel.

British infantry were flown north to just below the parallel during the day, while the rest of the British Commonwealth brigades in Korea— which consists of two British battalions and one Australian, moved up the road.

Communists murdered civilians

The United Nations Command made a larcenous appeal for food and medical supplies for the Korean civilians. After being requested repeatedly to provide a food guarantee for the Korean civilians, North Koreans refused to provide any guarantees.

The United Nations Command has been criticized for its failure to provide adequate food and medical supplies for the Korean civilians. North Koreans have repeatedly refused to provide any guarantees for the safety of the civilians.

Strong defense

At this point, the east coast of Korea is being powerfully defended by North Koreans against all attacks. A strong defense has been being mounted, with each attack being met by a strong counterattack from the North Koreans.
