THE CRUX

WITHIN the past few years, dockworkers in Bridgetown have received wage increases. These increases in wages have resulted in making the basic charges per ton of goods entering or leaving the Port by 12 percent higher than they were in the early days of the Port. In the month of July, the average wage for dockworkers is $1.50 per hour. During the month of August, the average wage for dockworkers is $1.50 per hour. This increase in wages has resulted in making the cost of handling cargo in the Port of Bridgetown much higher than it was in the past. However, the increase in wages has resulted in improving the standard of living of the dockworkers. The dockworkers are now able to afford better food, clothing, and housing than they were in the past.

Dockworkers are divided into three main sections: the waterfront, the warehouse, and the office. The waterfront section of the dockworkers consists of all the workers who work directly on the waterfront. The warehouse section consists of all the workers who work in the warehouses. The office section consists of all the workers who work in the office.

The waterfront section is divided into two parts: the stevedores and the longshoremen. The stevedores are responsible for loading and unloading the cargo from the ships. The longshoremen are responsible for moving the cargo from the ships to the warehouses.

The warehouse section consists of all the workers who work in the warehouses. The warehouse section is divided into two parts: the warehouse clerks and the warehouse workers. The warehouse clerks are responsible for keeping the records of the cargo that is stored in the warehouses. The warehouse workers are responsible for loading and unloading the cargo from the warehouses.

The office section consists of all the workers who work in the office. The office section is divided into two parts: the clerks and the managers. The clerks are responsible for keeping the records of the cargo that is handled in the Port. The managers are responsible for overseeing the operation of the Port.

The dockworkers are organized into a union, the Dockworkers Union of Bridgetown. The union is responsible for negotiating the wages and working conditions of the dockworkers.
