Liverpool's Little West Indies

By PAUL FOSTER

"Arikara!" Stood dapper in his uniform, a new recruit from Jamaica.

The Chief of Police in Jamaica has a reputation for being tough on crime and has been credited with reducing the rate of crime in the city.

Until recently, there were no West Indians in the police force, but now, there are a number of recruits from the island, who are proving to be a valuable asset.

The new recruits are being given special training in riot control and have been accused of being too lenient on the locals.

During the past few months, there have been a number of disturbances in the city, and the police have been called in to help.

The new recruits are proving to be a valuable asset to the police force, and it is hoped that they will be able to help reduce the rate of crime in the city.

The police force has also been given new equipment, including batons and helmets, to help them deal with the disturbances.

LAFFERSON YARD

A Resident Who Lived in Liverpool

The late Mr. Lafferson was a long-time resident of Liverpool, and was well known for his charitable works.

He had a large property in Liverpool, and was known for his generosity to the local community.

Mr. Lafferson was a great supporter of the local hospital, and had donated a large sum of money to help build a new ward.

He was also a great supporter of the local university, and had donated a number of scholarships to help students who were unable to afford to go to college.

Mr. Lafferson was a respected member of the community, and was well liked by all.

Three West Indians stop for a chat along Upper Parliament Street, Liverpool.

The Oil Palm

The Palm Oil

The oil palm is a valuable source of income for many countries in the tropics.

The palm tree is a large, green tree with a thick trunk and many branches.

The fruit of the palm tree is used to make oil, which is used in a variety of products, including soap, candles, and cosmetics.

The oil is extracted from the palm fruit, and is a valuable source of income for many countries.

The oil palm is also used as a source of fiber, and the residue is used as a fertilizer.
