I gave Him my all, mind, body, being, the whole.

How God kept me alive many times as I tried to succumb.

I look back and think about myself, foolish and dumb,

The peace that came and washed over me,

Somehow the Spirit slowly into my mind did creep.

I now realize for everything there’s a purpose to be had,

The peace that came and washed over me.

Lee said. “Citizens have a right to know what is going on in their community, to be treated with respect and dignity, to be listened to, to have their concerns and ideas heard,” Baker said. “There is no ‘T’ in team, and working together, everyone achieves more.”

“Each citizen deserves to be treated fairly, honestly, with courtesy at all times,” Bell said. “I believe that the people who serve in government are the privileged to provide friendly and respectful service.”

Lee has 28 years of law enforcement experience, including the Holmes County Sheriff’s Office and the Florida Highway Patrol. Bell has worked as a paramedic for 24 years and is a certified EMS director for 24 years and currently teaches criminal justice courses at the Florida State Penitentiary in Starke.

Baker was an instructor at Chipola College for 28 years and served as Holmes County E911 Director for 15 years and as a paramedic. He is a certified fire safety inspector and certi- fied firefighter and is a state-licensed fire marshal.

Bell said that his No. 1 mission has been to provide as much service to the public and to be dedicated to providing the best, efficient, and cost-effective service that Holmes County can provide. Baker has a bachelor’s degree in accounting from Florida State University and 30 years of public service experience.

Lee is a graduate of the Florida School of Banking and a graduate of the State of Florida Tax Collector Certification Program-Certified Florida Collector, a highly trained professional who works with the state’s tax collectors and county clerks of the circuit to collect delinquent taxes.

Bell said he has 22 years of public service experience, including five years of work with the State Attorney’s office. He has been a lifelong resident of Holmes County and lived at her residence on Highway 160 for more than 30 years. “Since leaving my in- stitutional employment, I have gained much experience in the public service,” Baker said. “I have over 26 years, I have the experience and the skills to serve as an attorney in our courts, including the circuit court.”

Vernon to proceed with water, sewer project

By CECILIA SPARAS

VERNON — Over one year later, the city of Vernon is moving forward with the long-awaited water and sewer project.

The city council approved the engineering agreements for both the Community Development Block Grant Water line improvement and the State Rural Water line project on Monday.

Mayor Michelle Barrios said there has been in need of replacing and expanding their water facility quite some time and with the rolling of State Road 79 the project has been delayed that much more.

“Funds are being taken in to ensure that this project proceeds in a steady pace,” said Grant Writer Nolan Baker.

The CDBG Water system improvement engineering agreement is allowing Baker to set out for the project and the USDA Water line engineering agreement is to go forward with designing the project. Before the meeting began there was a moment of silence for the recently departed City Council Member Oscar Ward. “He will be greatly missed by both the city hall and in the city of Vernon,” said Mayor Michelle Barrios. “He will be missed by all.”

The council approved allowing a basketball tournament to be held on Aug. 11 at the Vernon City Hall gym.

This council also approved of Brent Heard’s request to become an “Honorary Citizen of Vernon, FL.”

His request stated that he has many fond memories of Vernon and that his newest book would be entitled Postcards from Vernon.”
Is it getting hotter, or is it me?

I can tell you this, though. It isn’t nearly as old as I am. Four days ago, I think it was June 1, but that day didn’t feel that way. The temperature hit about 85, and that was about the hottest it had been all year. I can remember the days when we had to get up early in the morning to milk the cows and then spend the rest of the day working in the fields. Now, with central air conditioning, we can stay cool indoors around twilight.

I do remember those days when we had to use fans to keep the air moving and use screens on the windows to keep the mosquitoes out. Now, with screens, we can keep the bugs out of our house, and the air conditioning keeps the temperatures cool.

I remember the days when we had to wear long-sleeved shirts and hats to keep the sun out of our eyes. Now, with sunscreen and sunglasses, we can protect our skin from the harmful rays of the sun.

The green anole is no chameleon

There’s a growing movement in Florida, and the rest of the country, of that matter, to recognize the crucial value of pollinators and the role they play in agriculture and forestry. Pollinators include insects such as bees, butterflies, flies, and moths, and other wild species such as birds and bats. “Pollinators are absolutely crucial to the things we eat and, in some cases, what we wear,” said Arlo Kane, a wildlife biologist with the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC). “Pollinators move pollen between flowers and this annually accounts for the production of 20 billion worth of vegetables, fruits and nuts.” Kane was one of seven speakers on Friday night at the 2012 Conservation Congress for “The Great Pollinators.”

Kane was one of seven speakers attended were hosted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Wild Turkey Federation, the University of Florida — IFAS, and The Xerces Society for Invertebrate Conservation. Unfortunately, pollinators, and particularly species of insects, are in decline across the country, according to Kane. There are 4,000 species of bees that are native to the United States and most have disappeared or are only a fraction of their original number. A National Academy of Sciences report says the decline in pollinators due to habitat loss, diseases and widespread pesticide use. To stem the loss of pollinators, there’s an emphasis to get gardeners, homeowners and landowners to help by planting wildflowers and plants that are good for native bees and other insects. “The plants should be native to our area, which means they’ll likely require less fertilizer or water than plants from other parts of the country,” Kane said. “You also need a variety of plants so you have flowering plants from the spring into the fall.”

Green anoles are mistakenly called American chameleons because they change color. However, green anoles only turn shades of green, brown or gray, because of a sticky pad on the underside of their toes. Their tails are not coiled but long and thin and can break easily. This is so they can escape predators. When caught by the tail, the lizard curls its tail to break it and it can escape to freedom. The confused predator is left with only the tail and wondering where its lunch has gone. Lizard tails will grow back later.

Watching green anoles is easy. Around homes, they hang from walls, sway on reeds, climb shrubs, branches and even the windows of your office. A little green anole visits me daily. He perches on a railing outside my office window and bobs his head up and down, showing off his bright pink dewlap. He’ll visit for hours and hours, wondering where its lunch is. I wonder how he escapes predators. When caught by the tail, the lizard curls its tail to break it and it can escape to freedom. The confused predator is left with only the tail and wondering where its lunch has gone. Lizard tails will grow back later.

Green anoles, a type of American lizard, are often called American chameleons because they can change color, but they are not chameleons at all. These anoles are the only native lizard in the southeastern United States that can change color, but it is only recently that we’ve become aware of how they do it. Male anoles have a special pink dewlap, a piece of skin that extends from their throat when looking for a mate or when warning other males to back off. Their heads are also set off by the vivid red eyes that are strong. Mating season starts in the beginning of April and continues throughout the summer months. In south Florida, the mating season is a little longer if you see a green anole looking up and down and showing his dewlap, look around there may be a female near by. A to male lays one or sometimes two eggs every two weeks, usually in dirt or debris at the base of a plant. The green anole is the only native anole in the Southeast and is found from North Carolina west to Texas and throughout Florida. True chameleons, however, live in Africa, Madagascar, Portugal, Spain and parts of Asia. At least two species have been introduced into Florida. They can change to every color of the rainbow because of mood, temperature, habitat, stress, anger and disease. They often blend into their surroundings by changing color. Chameleons hold on to branches with their feet and curled tails. Their long, curled tongues shoot out like arrows to catch prey. Anoles are small, and slender like the chameleons, they have the ability to cling to objects but only

EBENZER — This literally begins with a kick and a promise.

Sarah Lucas, who has a few hounds from Ebenezer Greyhound Park, had promised one of the greyhound owners a ceremonial first throw of the Joe to Wences Lawrence, her former partner for four years in Illinois.

Lucas brought the male puppy to the track and the owners meeting at the Ebenezer, where Lucas’ trainer was Wences, the Ebenezer owner and operates AJN Kennel.

Duncan, who has been hand-raised, which was evident to Watson said. “I had to do it.”

Bonifay Postmaster Roger Brooks retires after 43 years of service.

National 4-H Archery Invitational

From Staff Reports

BONIFAY — After 6 years of service, Bonifay Postmaster Roger Brooks has announced his retirement as of July 31. According to Brooks, he began his career as a civilian at the Bonifay office during the summer shortly after graduating high school. Two years later he was appointed as a letter carrier and then was promoted to Supervisor of Customer Service shortly after.

Brooks said that during his time as Supervisor he had the privilege to work in many post offices in the panhandle of Florida, including Blountstown, Caryville, Graceville, Panama City and included many offices both North and South Florida and South Georgia. In 1983 he was appointed Postmaster of Bonifay. “I will miss the employees and the customers at the local office,” said Brooks. “Serving the public has been an honor and I have always tried to give back to the community. The entire opportunity has been a blessing.”

The retiring Postmaster acknowledged former Postmaster Ed Williams for his support during those early years of Brooks’ career. “I will continue to live in the Bonifay area, but I will be spending time with my daughters who live in South Carolina,” said Brooks.

After a year of practices and competing in the state archery competition, Levi McDonald represented Florida 4-H as one of the four archery team members at the National 4-H Shooting Sports Invitational. The competition spanned three days of shooting and included 100 youth representing 32 states and their 4-H programs. Shooting sports is one of the largest of all 4-H projects reaching 350,000 youth nationwide each year. While shooting sports teaches youth the sport, it also instills self-discipline, teamwork, critical thinking and problem-solving skills.

There are a number of things around your house that can be deadly to your cats and dogs, some you may know, and some may be surprising. Some are even in your kitchen cabinets and refrigerator.

Dr. Dorothy Black, clinical assistant professor at the Texas A&M University College of Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Sciences (CVM), shares some enlightening information about common foods that may be toxic to your pets.

According to Dr. Black, the following foods can be particularly dangerous to cats and dogs.

"These foods may not necessarily cause toxic reactions, but can cause serious health problems such as paralysis or death. So, even if your pets don’t show any signs of toxicity, it is always best to remove these items from the kitchen and let your pets eat only foods that are safe for them," Black said.

Here are some foods that can be harmful to pets:

- Grapes and raisins
- Chocolate
- Xylitol (sugar substitute)
- Macadamia nuts
- Onions and garlic
- Avocado
- Mushrooms
- Onions and garlic closet
- Macadamia nut toxicity
- Grapes and raisin ingestion

Apartment living can be toxic to your pets

There is no antidote, but supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology. However, toxic dose have been reported within one to two hours after ingestion. While no deaths have been reported to date, supportive care in the hospital is often required. Supportive care, which is the usual treatment for food toxicity, often involves to recover pets who ingest these foods.

Dr. Black said "If you suspect your pet has ingested these foods, it is best to contact your veterinarian immediately. If your pet has ingested these foods, supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology. However, there is no antidote, but supportive care is usually successful for recovery.

Some substances toxic to pets in the kitchen

There are a number of substances toxic to pets in the kitchen. These substances can be harmful to pets if ingested. Some substances may be harmful if ingested in small quantities while other substances may be harmful if ingested in large quantities.

- Grapes and raisins: Grapes and raisins can be toxic to pets. The exact mechanism by which grapes and raisins are toxic to pets is not known. However, there is no antidote, but supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology.

- Chocolate: Chocolate is toxic to pets. The toxic ingredient in chocolate is theobromine, which is responsible for the caffeine-like effects in pets. Chocolate is especially toxic to dogs and cats. Preventing chocolate poisoning is the best way to keep your pet safe. If your pet ingests chocolate, supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology.

- Xylitol: Xylitol is a common sugar substitute now used in many home kitchens. It is associated with a severe decline in blood sugar levels and liver failure if ingested by pets. The exact mechanism by which xylitol is toxic to pets is not known. However, there is no antidote, but supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology.

- Macadamia nuts: Macadamia nuts are toxic to pets. The toxic ingredient in macadamia nuts is a toxin called allicin, which is released upon crushing or grinding. Macadamia nuts are toxic to dogs and cats. Preventing macadamia poisoning is the best way to keep your pet safe. If your pet ingests macadamia nuts, supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology.

- Onions and garlic: Onions and garlic are toxic to pets. The toxic ingredient in onions and garlic is called allin, which is released upon crushing or grinding. Onions and garlic are toxic to dogs and cats. Preventing onion and garlic poisoning is the best way to keep your pet safe. If your pet ingests onions or garlic, supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology.

- Avocado: Avocado is toxic to pets. The toxic ingredient in avocado is called phytodetoxins, which are released upon crushing or grinding. Avocado is toxic to dogs and cats. Preventing avocado poisoning is the best way to keep your pet safe. If your pet ingests avocado, supportive care is typically successful for treatment of toxicology.

- Mushrooms: Mushrooms are toxic to pets. The toxic ingredient in mushrooms is called amatoxins, which are released upon crushing or grinding. Mushrooms are toxic to dogs and cats. Why a management career at Costa Enterprises McDonald’s? Because it’s much more than a career — it’s a curriculum for life. The training, skills and experiences you’ll gain from running your own multi-million dollar restaurant are simply unmatched. This is your opportunity for a career where anything’s possible. The sky is the limit, and we will line your skills and maximize your talents to reveal your true potential.

We believe in our people

We know what it’s like to be a leader. That’s why we provide you with a progressive career path that gives you the opportunity to be at the top of your game. Over 30 percent of McDonald’s Franchisees started out behind the counter; as did more than 75 percent of our Restaurant Managers, and many of McDonald’s Corporate Staff. We are committed to our people, which is why we offer opportunity; nurture talent; develop leaders and reward achievement. At McDonald’s we enjoy a diverse, collaborative environment that fosters respect and drives high levels of engagement with our associates, our continued success.

We believe in education

McDonald’s is committed to being a learning organization. Not only do we provide educational assistance to our employees, but we also offer a college scholarship program for outstanding student employees. Another unique benefit of a career with McDonald’s is our very own Harlandale University. This program lay an ideal foundation for building a high-powered career in McDonald’s management and beyond. McDonald’s is currently the only organization to be recognized by the American Council on Education (ACE) for our Restaurant Management curriculum. Your participation in our training programs can earn you credit toward your college degree program.

We believe in giving back to our communities

At McDonald’s you play an important role in serving the community. Did we tell all the people you know, meet, serve, hire or greet are all part of it. Over the years, millions of people have frequented McDonald’s because its a trusted name with proven service. Giving back to our community through educational, athletic and other avenues is our way of returning that loyalty. We are extremely proud to support Ronald McDonald House Charities® and its cornerstone program, Ronald McDonald House®.

We believe in perks

We value the hard work and dedication of each member of our team. At Costa Enterprises McDonald’s we are pleased to provide exceptional benefits that reflect our appreciation for our people and their contributions to our success. Benefits include competitive wages, flexible hours, health insurance options, monthly bonus plans, continued education, 401(k), paid vacations, and up to wireless phone, laptop and even a company vehicle when you reach the General Manager position!

We believe that you make the difference

Do you feel like you have what it takes to manage one of our fast-paced multi-million dollar restaurants?
